Pt. Arthur Night School Helps Cut Down Illiteracy

Effort Being Made to Take City Out of Lead In Number of Those Unable to Read and Write; Night School Proves Popular

By E. H. McGuire
The News Staff

WHAT is Port Arthur doing to combat illiteracy? Illiteracy here, or rather lack of it, had been taken for granted until Mrs. Cora Wilson Stewart, chautauqua lecturer, told Port Arthurians their city leads all other Texas cities in the number of illiterates.

Of the 5,569 people in Jefferson county unable to read or write, Port Arthur has 1,801, according to figures quoted by Mrs. Stewart. As the originator of the famous Kentucky "moonlight schools" which opened with a first night enrollment of 1,200 men and women, all mountaineers, Mrs. Stewart became a nationally known educator.

Night School Popular

Mrs. Stewart raised the question, and Port Arthurians are taking it up. The answer is found in every day school here, and one night school. Beyond these nothing, probably, is needed to improve the situation of illiteracy in Port Arthur. Now the improvement seems to be up to the illiterates themselves. And taking the night school as an example, men and women, young and old, representing nearly half a dozen nationalities, are taking care of reducing illiteracy in Port Arthur.

"Mothers and fathers come to the night school sessions bringing babies with them too small to be left at home." Miss Wayne Young, who was one of the organizers of this night school in Franklin building six years ago and is still in the work, said: "They are eager to learn to read, write and speak English—all of these night school students, comprising Mexicans, Italians, and people who speak Louisiana French," Miss Young said.

School Has Grown

Six years ago, on the opening of the school here, 23 men and seven women enrolled. Now the enrollment is 100 and three members of the Port Arthur faculty, Miss Wayne Young, her sister, Miss Jane Young, and Miss Laurola Burnham, are on the work on Monday and C. J. Campion, now of Dallas, in the opening of this night school October 12, 1918.

"Not one of all the students who have attended the school to learn enough English to take out his first citizenship papers said that is why many of them attend, but have ever turned down for failing, to pass the examinations given at the federal building at Beaumont," Miss Young said.

The members are interested in their work. They came because their desire to learn, and their tell others about the opportunities. This is the greatest factor which has enabled the school to succeed and grow to its present size. This year we have more Louisiana French people studying English than we have ever had before.

Mexicans Ambitious

"Mexicans enroll for the work more than any other foreigners in the city. They merely desire to learn, as very few of them ever take out citizenship papers. And as an example of the kind of students they make, seven Mexican boys who attended the school are now studying architecture in Chicago.

"Four Italian boys who have been in the school since the beginning form an outstanding example of the interest taken in learning English.

None of these boys is over 23 years of age. One of them mothers several little brothers and sisters, working for them all day, seeing that they go to school, and then two nights each week, he himself comes in night school. Just the other day his father died, but despite increased burdens and responsibilities, he's still in night school.

Father and Daughters Attend

"An old man and his four daughters are among the present students. A mother comes with a baby in her arms. One man, who brings his wife and baby, is in the beginner's book, learning English so he can get his citizenship papers. The beginners are taught by Miss Burnham, and her work is most interesting of all. When her pupils are sufficiently advanced, they assist other students to learn, helping immensely by interpreting for us."

The night school, established six years ago to teach men and women to read, write and in many cases speak English, apparently is just coming into its own. From the initial enrollment of 21 in 1918, the attendance dropped to a sharp drop the following year, 1919, that the faculty was reduced to one. No improvement was registered in 1920 when only 13 pupils attended, and 1921, although double the former session enrollment, gave the night school a student body of only 24.

Marked improvement in 1922 is recorded, when 72 students enrolled and two teachers, instead of one, carried on the work. At the end of the first month of the 1923-24 session, 80 students signed up for the course. Month by month this enrollment has grown. The second

DISCOVER CROOKED DICE

But That Didn't Keep Him From Winning

By ROGER W. ARCHER
The News Staff

"Dice is a popular game, more adapted to the African than to the Mongolian or . . . but most every growing fellow with red bloods gets a tingle to gamble some now and then, and that's why I've risked my luck a time or two at the 'gallopers'."

John Milton, retired and reformed gambler, who has a lot of years as long as your arm and longer, took up his favorite position at his mahogany desk, with his feet propped up, got his favorite "weed" to smoke, and then "cut loose."

"I don't think I ever will forget a game I got into one time when I was running around down at Sabine. Begins Contributing."

"The boys had had a little game going out at the stable, back of the place where I was staying, and the crowd we'd got pretty well mixed up in the course of events."

"Well, to eat my ears decidedly to the point, young fellow, on this particular occasion to which I am about to refer. I had gotten in the game right off the jump. Fact is, I helped to start the thing off. And right from the first there was four negroes and a sailor that were in that game for blood. It was easy to tell that."

"Well, I contrabuted a bank roll after an hour's shooting—mounted to something like a couple of hundred. I believe I and I dropped out. Thought I'd just hang around a bit and watch these other boys contribute to the little speckled gods of greed that kept this game—so I did."

He Gets to Thinking

"And first thing you know, them four negroes and that sailor had all the money and it was a battle of wits and other skill as they rolled their bones for the pile."

"Well, that didn't look just right to me. I hated like thunder to sit there and watch that quinie walk right off with my coin—so I countered out of the stable and went to the porch. I had a pal up there. He had a pair of dice that here questioned. Fact is, there were tops and bottoms, 4 to 11."

I Looked 'em over. They were just the color—white—of those in the game. I fingered 'em a few seconds and concluded they were about the same size and calibre. Then I sauntered back to the stable with those dice in my shoe."

"In your show, Mr. Milton? What were you going to do with them there?"

His Hand Is Called

"Wait, young fellow. I'll get to that part." Milton replied. "I sat back down in the game. One negro had been eliminated. They passed the bones around, and it came my turn. I got four dollars and made a four. I fumbled around a bit. I dragged those crooked dice from my shoes and rolled 'em. And boy, you never seen such 'rollin' in your life. I rolled and rolled and rolled. I made enough eights to buy the statue of Liberty. If they'd have all paid, I threw enough eights to break up a dozen games if my money had been on each time."

"Then that sailor got suspicious, grabbed them bones and said:

"Say, Milton, you can't make a fo' to these bones, they're crooked from 4 to 12."

"Them negroes jumped up and looked sort of sore. I grabbed them bones and looked 'em over as it was for the course. Month by month this en-

When Port Arthur Boys Buy Posies They Avoid Lilies, Florist Says

IN THE language of flowers, lilies of the valley are now singing soft of silver broid velvets and cascades of snowy satin gleaming under candle light.

Port Arthur lads in just as well send their lady loves a French powder puff which plays Lohengrin's bridal chorus or Mendelssohn's wedding march when the lid is raised as to order them a corsage of valley lilies.

That is the observation of Miss Aleene Johnson, of the Griffing floral shop, who helps men and women, old and young, make their selections of flowers for weddings, funerals and sick rooms.

Carnations, most expensive of the flowers' offerings right now, except the rare orchids, which are selling at $7 to $10 each right now, are the popular selections with young men here, and rose run the carnations a close second in the bids of those who buy it with flowers, according to Miss Johnson.

Once in a while, though, the tiny clusters of white, bell-shaped valley lilies on the soft tones of faintest green, find their way into the fingers of youth who are not buying flowers for the wedding, exactly, but are merely seeking to drop a gentle hint that way or, in other words, to say it with flowers, Miss Johnson said.

The bellies lilies. Easier and calmer, the former sweet to the point of sickening, the latter wavy and stiff, powerfully suggestive of funerals, are not popular with people buying to cheer up a sick room or help their cause along with lady loves, the florist observed.

Bobbed Hair Makes Girls All Look Alike

"Say, can you tell these girls apart that you just casually know?" a friend prodded the other day.

"Sure—what do you mean 'em apart, anyway?"

"Well, it's getting to be such an ordinary thing to see a girl with bobbed hair, that they have all come to look a great deal alike in many respects, and they're hard to recognize at a short distance, don't you think so?"

"And before we had that idea, we had never had before. Bobbed hair has become common style among not a certain group, not necessarily the flapper, the middle aged group, or any other individual division of women—but bobbed hair is common to the masses now just as the 'feathered' is common among the men. And looking them over at a short distance, you are as likely to pick one girl out as your friend as any other—especially if you have just recently made her acquaintance."

VOTERS GET FREE SHAVE

SANTO DOMINGO, April 12.—Having had much trouble in the past over "repeaters" at elections, the Santo Domingo legislature have decided to shave a spot on the head of each voter as he casts his ballot. He will be marked with indelible ink in the past, the finger was dipped in indelible ink, but a chemical was applied to politicians to clean the fingers and permit a second and third vote.

The club will be on a tour 17 days and will give 20 concerts. Two programs are offered, sacred and secular. The secular program includes classical numbers, popular selections, and a group of negro dialect songs. Miss Lorena Miller, Cooper, senior in college and a member of the Historical-Philis Literary Society. She is a member of the trio and sextet and sings the solo part in the final chorus of the program.

The Choral Club, which is composed of a chorus of 28 voices, readers and piano and violin solos, is directed by Mrs. Alice Coleman Pierce, mezzo-soprano. Mrs. Pierce is a teacher of voice in Baylor college, and has been director of the Choral Club for four years.

City Fireboys Now Have Motor Boat

After coots, alligators, crocodiles, ring-tailed monkeys, cut down firemen, kites, fishing nettle, etc., etc., the fire boys at central station now have motorboat.

"Well, when he'd gone, I threw the crooks down on the floor and said:

"Now we can shoot with snare bones, boys," and them boys fell to their knees a-takin' to the other dice with renewed pep.

"How did I come out of the game?"

"Well, it wouldn't help 'em any, any to tell that, but when I got out of it that stable and thought of how I'd outguesed that sailor for callin' my hand and discoverin' them crooked bones, I just said:

"They negroes jumped up and looked 'em over as it was for the course. Month by month this en-

Recently, to prove the theory, he accompanied John W. Tryon to the jetties for a fishing jaunt.

And you see here what the two of them collected in two and half hours of fishing.

"We didn't use reels—we used ordinary cane poles, and some of those fish surely did pull," Mr. Craig relates.

The catch netted 200 pounds of red and sheep-head, and were captured March 2. March, very curiously, is associated with the winter months in Port Arthur and all along the Gulf, for that matter. And that is why Misses Craig and Tryon are especially well pleased with their catch.

"We brought the fish back frozen from having been placed in cans on ice," one of the fishermen told us yesterday, "that's why you notice their tails are turned up in some instances. When we hung them up for the picture, they were too stiff to straighten out."

People May Soon Loop The Loop on Bike

There's the power of genius even in the humble Mexican.

And Port Arthur claims her share of the geniuses who hail from Mexico.

Eliza Martinez of 145 Eighth street through the assistance of the local Mexican consulate, has just received a 17-year patent from Washington on his own invention, the "Mamal Airplane Bicycle."

It's Possibilities

Ever think of a bike—just an ordinary bike—taking the air-like airplane and soaring through the clouds? Why not? If Martinez has invented a logical contraption that will fly, it may not be many months until men begin to turn out more dice—looping-the-loop and what not in mid-air.

Free Trip To Scout Camp Offered

CONTEST OPEN UNTIL APRIL 23

Suggestions Should Be Sent
Headquarters

The Port Arthur Boy Scout Council announced it would like to have a name for its camp to be held on Beach creek this summer. The location is the same spot where camp was held last year. The Scout who gives the best name will receive a free trip to the camp for two weeks beginning June 1, and ending June 29. The contest will close at 8 p. m., Wednesday, April 23, 1924. Bring or mail all names to Scout headquarters, Room 17, Disbursed building.

TROOP SIX
Troop Six opened their meeting at 8 p. m. This hour was set for the reason that all of the boys attended services at the church.

After the pledge of allegiance and Scout oath were said, the roll was called. Seventeen members and four candidates were present. The candidates were instructed in their tenderfoot tests. The patrol leaders were called up and the patrol cards were given out. While this was going on inspection was held. Mr. Jackowitz who is our Scout committee man was asked to pass upon inspection. Those who remained standing after his careful examination were: Lawrence and Alfred Moreau, Milton and Elroy Quebeceaus, Tom Head, George Stiehl and Leonard Stansbury. All were members of patrol four so they earned the points for the contest. Mr. Jackowitz spoke for a few minutes. He expressed the desire that every Scout wear his uniform and urged that those who have none to do their best toward obtaining one. He is offering a prize to the troop having the most Scouts in uniform by a certain date. The senior patrol leader and scribes will decide upon the prize. Come on fellows and let us get that prize.

A game called "Rooster Fighting" was played. As one is defeated he continues to fight the remaining fellow. "Swat the Fly" was then played. It is a game well liked by the members of our troop. The patrol cards were turned in and scored. Patrol four, 46 points; patrol one, 28 points; patrol three, 26 points and patrol two, 12 and a fraction. Patrol four's Scout went up another rung on the ladder.

The meeting was closed with call to colors after which the patrol leaders, senior patrol leader and scribe held their meeting. At the next meeting a captain will be elected for the baseball team. Hurry Scouts, rush bird houses, only two more meetings till due.

LEONARD STANSBURY, Scribe.

BICYCLE PATROL
The Bicycile Patrol met at the home of Mr. Daupin last Tuesday night.

Mr. Daupin suggested that the patrol specialize in a merit badge and signaling was chosen. When every member is declared perfect the patrol will put on exhibitions and tender service to the troops in the city which desire aid. It was decided that all Scouts in the patrol would be required to pass the cycling merit badge within the next two months or discard their badges. At the last board of examiners, four out of the bicycle patrol went up for badges. They were Walton, Dumensil, Aristide, Landry, George Stiehl and Leonard Stansbury. This shows that the Scouts in the patrol are anxious to forge ahead. Enoch Proctor who was initiated last week is now attending meetings as a member. Roy Gentil will be the next initiate into the patrol. Mr. Daupin read an article forwarded to him from proved to be very interesting. All the Washington leaders are. It members present seemed to be "full up" with the baseball idea. The line of players is as follows: Walton Dumensil, pitcher; Roy Gentil, catcher; Fred Wattie, first baseman; Ervin Laughlin, second baseman; Enoch Proctor, short stop; Theel, Jim, right field; Leonard Stansbury, center field; Chubby Stiehl, right field; Aristide Landry, left field; Captain, Walton Dumensil; manager, Leonard Stansbury. A game was obtained with Port Neches for Sunday. Right after first service we will leave for Port Neches. One visitor was present and so were our two assistant scoutmasters. Our visitor was Mr. Moran and the assistant scoutmasters who will go with us on our thousand mile ride are Mr. Murphy, Ferguson and Mr. McCarthy. A game was played on the outside and much fun was derived from it. We were dismissed at 9:30 p. m.

LEONARD STANSBURY, Scribe.

"LONE STAR" SEAScouts
We met at our ship's headquarters last Wednesday night. We rowed to the city slip before the meeting was held. The meeting was called to order by Captain "Cow" King. The Scout oath was said in unison after which roll was called and dues collected. It was urged that those who have not paid their registration fees do so at a very early date in order that the Sui puny be placed in good standing at headquarters. A work meeting for Saturday was discussed and any number promised to turn out for it.

"Cow" King, "Coffee John" and several others went in for a swim and while enjoying themselves someone took their clothes. Quite a lot of fun was had with them while they were hunting for their clothes. Since the warm weather a number of the boys have taken to the water.

WILLIAM JAMES, Scribe.

TROOP SEVEN
Our regular meeting was held at the Seaside Inn Friday night. A good attendance made the meeting happy. Several of the boys took up know work. Games were played and the compass game proved to be the best and hottest. Mr. Waltrip announced that we would have a weiner roast next Friday night across the canal. It is urged that those who desire to go on this weiner roast be at the Seaside Inn at 7:30 p. m. or they will be left behind. "Try and get every member in Troop Seven to attend and show the old time pep we used to have. Failure to do so will prove you have no 'get up' in you.

ROBERT BARAY, Scribe.

TROOP ELEVEN
We held our meeting Friday night. Only thirteen members were present. No tests were passed. Roll was called. Games were played and in the contest game of "Steal the Flag" Clifford Harris and his chosen bunch won. Two visitors were present. It is hoped that better attendance will be had at the next meeting and that tests will be passed.

THERON McCOMBER, Scribe.

CREW 5, SEA SCOUTS
We met at the Methodist church Friday night. All members were present. The scout oath was said in unison. Roll was called. The rest of the meeting was spent in passing the sleep tests. Most of us lack but a few tests before the sleep class is completed. Two have finished the tests. They are Coxswain Pond and Clifton Heiles. We seem to have lost the spirit for work. We have been requested several times to report to the hut for work and each time only one or two would show up. Make the next Saturday a real banner day at the hut. Our crew has lots to do and it will not be long before the Sea Scout camp will be held and we will be rushed at the last minute. A few games of "candy" were played. Mack Pond, Ernest McFarland and Frank Capps played Floyd Clarke and Weldon Sherwood. The former beat the latter team 5 to 3. No casualties as the game was played scientifically. Three members are behind with their registration fees and are urged to "snap them in."

FLOYD CLARKE, Yeoman.

TROOP 15
Troop 15 held its regular meeting Wednesday night. The Scout oath was said in unison. Roll was called and dues collected. Election of officers took place with results as follows: Roy Gentil, senior patrol leader; scribe, Eddie Bertland, patrol leader No. 1, Ossie Landry; Nolan Landry, assistant patrol No. 2, Chester Billard, patrol leader; Earl Savant, assistant patrol 3; Ray Gentil

PARIS STARTS -
BOOZE FIGHT

Land of Grape Juice in Big Contest

BY MILTON BRONNER
NEA Service Staff Correspondent
PARIS, April 12—France, land of sparkling fermented grape juice, brandies, liqueurs, cordials and aperitifs, has a healthy and growing anti-booze movement.

Right here in Paris where booze is as plentiful as baw in New York, wind in Chicago and sunshine in Los Angeles, there are at least 14 societies whose main object in life is to fight booze.

The biggest of them—"Ligue Nationale contre l'Alcoolisme"—has its headquarters right on the famous Boulevard Saint Germain, scene of so many famous drinking contests.

True, the various societies and leagues do not seem to have advanced very far, or to have become prosperous, as yet—but it must be remembered that the prohibition movement in the United States was scuttled in its infancy and regarded as an impossible goat.

Anti-Alcohol in Stomachs

There is a striking similarity in the literature put out here and that scattered about the United States during the prohibition movement. American arguments are translated into terms of French life, French experiments, French science, French speeches and French statistics.

"Alcohol in lamps, under boilers, in motors—but not in stomachs," is a statement credited to a former president of the republic, Casimir-Perier.

Three Lines of Attack

The anti-booze societies of France advocate three methods of procedure:

FIRST—An extensive campaign of education to be begun in the schools to teach the people the dangers of alcohol.

SECOND—Laws which if not downright prohibitory, would at least move in the direction of temperance. And one of the first moves in this direction, they say, would be to cut down the number of saloons. It is pointed out that per thousand inhabitants Paris has 11.25 saloons, compared with 8.81 in San Francisco's palmiest days. Bordeaux, the big city which is the capital of the wine country of France, has 5.14, compared to 3.95 Chicago used to have, 3.15 in New York and 1.31 in Philadelphia.

THIRD—Further encouragement in the present boom is outdoor athletic sports. Various French athletes are quoted as saying they can't drink liquor if they want to maintain their color for a dental surgeon.

FLYING CURES "NERVES"
LONDON, April 12—Bound over on a charge of assaulting a woman, Joseph McGarry, 42, said:

MADAME HELLENE

Beauty Expert, at Deutser's
Says It Costs But
Half a Penny

Before coming to Port Arthur Madame Hellene, Beauty Specialist, representing the Elmo Toilet Preparations, made an extensive study of the southwestern climate effects on the complexion and says that the correct use of the right creams will improve and beautify anyone's complexion even in our trying climate. She further says that it takes but five minutes a day and the cost is but half a penny a day for the treatment necessary.

Continuing, Madame Hellene says: "One may have good eyes, regular features and glorious hair, but if the complexion is shallow or colorless there is little beauty in the face." Modern beauty creams do much to eradicate any unnatural conditions of the skin, and she personally recommends Elmo, preparations for this climate, to be used as follows:

For removing blackheads and whiteheads and building up the tissues use Elmo Tissue Cream. For cleansing the skin thoroughly and for bleaching use Elmo Cleansing Cream. If the skin is discolored or the pores enlarged the Elmo Cucumber Cream is used. Especially suited to our climate is the Elmo Liquid Face Powder (for it stays on and protects the skin at the same time.) The Raio Almond Meal Face Powder, made by Elmo, is also beneficial.

A bit of rouge, artistically applied when it comes in nature's own tints such as the Elmo Rouge comes in, is the nearest approach to the natural coloring of youth. Madame Hellene will be at this store one week and will be pleased to give you any further information you desire along these lines. She will also be pleased to tell you what treatment will be best suited to your particular needs.

Thrift Essays Written for First National Bank by Pupils of Port Arthur
Public Schools

Thrift is the basis of self-help, the condition of one who thrives or prospers. We must work for the present and future. The really thrifty people are those who waste nothing and spend wisely.

We may base thrift on: Time, money and material.

No phase of thrift is more important than proper use of time. The exclusion of minor and unimportant details is what we must consider.

The earning and saving of money should be made our duty. Every person should learn to invest properly and buy intelligently. The most valuable channels for saving and investments are: "The First National Bank," "The Thrift Stamp," and "The War Saving Stamp." Every one should start a bank account.

Thrift teaching lays emphasis upon simplicity in dress, clothing is renovated and repaired, instead of thrown away. Girls can make garments for their own use. Shoes may be sent to the cobbler.

Evangelist Brown Makes Sulphur Springs, Arkansas, Jazzless College Town

MOTELS SERVE TWO PURPOSES

Resort in Summer, School Dormitory in Winter

By NEA Service
SULPHUR SPRINGS, Ark., April 12.—A university in winter—
A health resort in summer—
"Jazzless" the whole year 'round.
That's the future John E. Brown, evangelist and college president, has mapped out for this Ozark Mountain town.

And since he's brought up three-fourths of it, Brown certainly is in a position to dictate how things ought to be run in Sulphur Springs.

In the deal, Brown acquired three hotels, parks, lake and springs, business property and residence sites.

Town to Be University

Brown, founder and head of John E. Brown College at Sulphur Springs, near here, will move the university here.

The hotels will provide dormitory and class room facilities. In summer, they will house tourists.

But summer or winter, jazz will be taboo. No dancing, no card playing, no drinking will be tolerated.

There will be band concerts, golfing, tennis, swimming, fishing and horseback riding.

The school, while interdenominational and non-sectarian, stands uncompromisingly committed to the Bible. All students are required to study it.

None will be permitted to matriculate who can afford to pay even a part of the tuition costs. It's entirely for poor boys and girls.

All Work

All students work a few hours each day—some in the printshop, some on the farms, some in the kitchen, some in the tailor shops.

The university fulfills an ambition of Brown's early manhood—to give deserving boys and girls opportunity to gain the education, he, himself, was denied.

A score of years ago Brown worked in a limestone quarry at 75 cents a day. He professed religion during a Salvation Army revival.

When the evangelist left he was commissioned to open a mission. Since then he's conducted meetings all over this section.

But all the time he's never lost sight of his early dreams.

PARTIES WATCH CONTRIBUTIONS

WASHINGTON, March 12.—The danger of "stained money," "filthy lucre," in politics never was realized more keenly than at present, when the reasons behind large gifts of cash to party campaign funds are being laid bare for public inspection.

The natural reaction is to make both old parties exceedingly wary of how and from whom they obtain "contributions" this year. Perhaps later, when the flurry of the present investigations has passed, and the need for cash is more pressing, the disinterestedness of each dollar will not be so closely watched.

In the Democratic outfit, Chairman Cordell Hull has even gone so far as to have made up a financial black-list—a list of persons and interests who are under no circumstances to be permitted to contribute to Democracy's cause this year. Already at least two sizable contributions have been rejected.

In the same way, Chairman Adams is reported to be censoring the sources of Republican revenue.

If this aversion to the dollars of the rich and powerful continues, many millionaires will be unable to make their usual deduction on their income tax reports under the head of "contributions."

WEIRD, creeping, annoying sensations—scratch—scratch—scratch—scratches—eczema and other skin eruptions, spoiling your complexion—causing you uncalled for embarrassment—anguish—ruining your temper. All because of impurities that are rampant in your system—because your red blood cells are dormant.

S. S. S. clears up skin eruptions through its power of cleansing the blood. Herbs and herbs, carefully selected and scientifically prepared and proportioned, which make up the ingredients in S. S. S. are the most feared and dreaded enemies of skin disorders. Eczema, pimples, boils, blackheads and other skin diseases pack up and leave the system when S. S. S. sends new rich blood coursing through your veins.

Have a general house cleaning for your system. Let S. S. S. rid you of those impurities which tend to keep you in a run-down condition. Skin disorders are nothing more than billboards announcing that the system is "off color." S. S. S. is sold by the leading drug stores. The large size bottle is the more economical.

SUNDAY
In the Name of the Lord

Read Mt. 21:11. Text: 21:9. Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord.

"Jesus is represented in the Gospels to have felt the will of God thrusting him into the responsibility of supreme world leadership in the sphere of a leadership in which he would liberate all men from bondage to evil by leading them into such measure of his own religious experiences as they might be trained to achieve."

MEITATION: Throughout his life Jesus spoke in the name of the Lord and he used for benevolent purposes the great power of God. His entry into the world's life created a new era as it made God's life and love real to men and God's will understandable to them. He opened the way to the Father's heart.

PERSONAL QUESTION: On what acts of my life may I write "In the name of the Lord?"

PRAYER: O God, our Father, we lift up our eyes to thee in confidence and hope that we may draw our life from thee. Fill our day with eternal meaning. May thy name be our shield. Amen.

FROM MILLIONS TO PENNIES

That's Life Drama of Hopeless Bankrupt

HACKENSACK, N. J., April 12.—The rise of Henry Siegel from a $3.50-a-week clerk to the head of one of the largest mercantile institutions in this country and his fall to part ownership in a tiny New Jersey haberdashery is a stage plot made to order.

Scene one is laid in Chicago where he fought against poverty, got his footing and finally organized Siegel, Cooper & Co.

Scene two shifts to New York City. Here he has a town house and a country estate at Mamaroneck. He plays golf, travels, belongs to expensive clubs and lives the gilt-edge life of a millionaire.

Scene three, a five-room flat in Rutherford, N. J., that costs just $60 a month, from which Siegel takes a trolley each morning to Hackensack to open the doors of the Henri Men's Shop and waits on customers all day, then back home in the evening again—by trolley.

Scene four—Well, Siegel himself doesn't know what it may bring, but he hopes it's nothing spectacular.

"I'd like to fade quietly from the picture," he told me as we talked of the failure in which he had lost all to his creditors. "I'd like to 'come back,' but it's too late. So I must be contented. I make a fair living, and it's just as easy to keep your expenses down to $30 a week as it is to blow in $100 a day—if you have to."

Freight trains in the United States in 1922 traveled 344,780,000 miles.

"more business in government and less government in business."

Turning aside from his plans for the state Saturday he referred to attacks being made upon him by the five candidates in the race.

Explaining his version of their centralized attack, he said, "I'll tell you the reason why they are doing it. If I am the man the political fears in this race for the management of your vast corporation, and no wonder. For years and years they have been coming down the line, piling up a bureau here, a commission there, and a tax over yonder, and another expense over there. Now they are flabbergasted. Their backs are to the wall, against a swelling cry from the citizenship of Texas for a government managed on sound business principles."

The voters of Texas, appalled at the 300 per cent increase in their taxes during the last ten years as compared with the 25 per cent increase in population, are looking for a business man of proven ability and integrity to run the affairs of their State, and my opponents, who are concentrating their attacks upon me, know it."

Sheriff Edwards is willing to give the old man the bit of revenge that will come from pulling the trigger.

Ward killed Grosh and assaulted Miss Maxine Menely, student at the State normal school and daughter of a leading cattleman of the state who was riding home with Grosh from a Christmas dance.

Port Arthur Acts to Get Out of Lead in Illiteracy in State of Texas

Duff Line to Tap Paradise of Resources

Pt. Arthur Night School Helps Cut Down Illiteracy

Effort Being Made to Take City Out of Lead In Number of Those Unable to Read and Write; Night School Proves Popular

By E. H. McGUIRE
The News Staff

WHAT is Port Arthur doing to combat illiteracy? Illiteracy here, or rather lack of it, had been taken for granted until Mrs. Cora Wilson Stewart, chautauqua lecturer, told Port Arthurians their city leads all other Texas cities in the number of illiterates.

Of the 3,569 people in Jefferson county unable to read or write, Port Arthur has 1,301, according to figures quoted by Mrs. Stewart. As the originator of the famous Kentucky "moonlight schools" which opened with a first night enrollment of 1,200 men and women, all mountaineers, Mrs. Stewart became a nationally known educator.

Night School Popular

Mrs. Stewart raised the question, and Port Arthurians are taking it up. The answer is found in every day school here, and one night school. Beyond these nothing, negligibly, is needed to improve the situation of illiteracy in Port Arthur. Now the improvement seems to be up to the illiterates themselves. And taking the night school as an example, men and women, young and old, representing nearly half a dozen nationalities, are taking care of re-due illiteracy in Port Arthur.

"Mothers and fathers come to the night school sessions bringing babies with them too small to be left at home," Miss Wayne Young, who was one of the organizers of this night school in Franklin building six years ago and is still in the work, said. "They are eager to learn to read, write and speak English—all of these night school students, comprising Mexicans, Indians, and negroes, who speak Louisiana French," Miss Young said.

School Has Growth
Six years ago on the opening night of the school here, 24 men and seven women, enrolled. Now the enrollment is 160 and three members of the Port Arthur faculty, Miss Wayne Young, her sister, Miss Jane Young, and Miss Laurella Burnham, on the work on Monday and C. J. Crampton, now of Dallas, in the opening of this night school October 12, 1918.

"Not one of all the students who have attended the school to learn enough English to take out his first citizenship papers, and that is why many of them attend, has ever been turned down for failing to pass the examinations given at the federal building at Beaumont," Miss Young said.

The members are interested in their work. They came because they desire to learn, and tell others about the opportunities. This is, I believe, the greatest factor which has enabled the school to succeed and grow to its present size. This year we have more Louisiana French people studying English than we have ever had before.

Mexicans Ambitious
Mexicans enroll for the work more than any other foreigners in the city. They merely desire to learn, as very, very few of them ever take out citizenship papers. And as an example of the kind of students they make, seven Mexican boys who attended the school are now studying architecture in Chicago.

Four Italian boys who have been in the school since the beginning form an outstanding example of the interest taken in learning English. None of these boys is over 23 years of age. One of them mothers several little brothers and sisters, working for them all day, seeing that they go to school, and then two nights each week, he himself comes to night school. Just the other day his father died, but despite increased burdens and responsibilities, he's still in night school.

Father and Daughters Attend
"An old man and his four daughters are among the present students. A mother comes with a baby in her arms. One man, who brings his wife and baby, is in the beginner's book, learning English so he can get his citizenship papers. The beginners are taught by Miss Burnham, and her work is most interesting of all. When her pupils are sufficiently advanced, they assist other students to learn, helping immensely by interpreting for us."

The night school established six years ago to teach men and women to read, write and in many cases speak English, apparently is just coming into its own. From the initial enrollment of 31 in 1918, the attendance dropped so sharply the following year, 1919, that the faculty was reduced to one. No improvement was registered in 1920 when only 13 pupils attended, and 1921, although double the former session enrollment, gave the night school a student body of only 24.

Marked improvement in 1922 is recorded, when 72 students enrolled and two teachers, instead of one, carried on the work. At the end of the first month of the 1923-24 session, 80 students signed up for the course. Month by month this enrollment has grown. The second

It's Fishing Time in Port Arthur Again

FISH bite just as well in the winter as in the summer.

This is the theory advanced by George M. Craig, anyway, who presents herewith evidence as proof positive that his theory is correct.

Now we've had a lot of fishing ideas sprung on us recently; one about an umbrella and a pump, and others too numerous to recall, but Mr. Craig avers the fish will bite at the jetties just as well in March as they do in April or any other month in the season, so long as the wind isn't blowing and the tide is coming in.

Recently, to prove the theory, he accompanied John W. Tropin to the jetties for a fishing jaunt.

And so see here what the two of them collected in two and a half hours of fishing.

"We didn't use reels—we used ordinary cane poles, and some of those fish surely did pull," Mr. Craig relates.

The catch netted 200 pounds of red and sheep head, and were captured March 2, March, very peculiarly, is associated with the winter months in Port Arthur and all along the Gulf, for that matter. And that is why Messrs. Craig and Tropin are especially well pleased with their catch.

"We brought the fish back frozen from having been placed in cans on ice," one of the fishermen told us yesterday. "That's why you notice their tails are turned up in some instances. When we hung them up for the picture, they were too stiff to straighten out."

Await Permission Of I. C. C. to Get Outlet to Water

Vast Store of Raw Materials for Export Seen By Inspection Party as They Tour Section To Be Traversed by Railroad

By TOM J. WILHELM
The News Staff

AN UNTAPPED paradise in lumber, mineral and agricultural resources will be tapped in Eastern Texas soon, if not by the railroad headed by Col. R. C. Duff, then by another line.

It would be inadvisable to deny that territory, so rich in many respects, the right to get to the sea to dispose of its produce in the markets of our and foreign countries.

Col. Duff and his band of associates in the Waco, Beaumont, Trinity and Sabine road propose to open up and develop those latent resources of Eastern Texas pending the permission of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The Duff line and K. C. S. S. road protesting against the construction of the part of the Duff project lying between Beaumont and Port Arthur, have until May 1, to file their briefs of the case to the Interstate Commerce Commission. Upon these briefs and the testimony developed at the hearing on the protest at Austin will the I. C. C. have its decision.

Work on Briefs
For the last three weeks a staff of five stenographers has been kept busy at work on the brief and it will be in the hands of the I. C. C. before the time limit has expired.

An inspection trip over the lines of the WRTS was completed Thursday and showed the resources of the country to a good advantage.

Port Arthur business men who were fortunate enough to attend the hearing at Austin heard the truth about the possibilities of the road as brought out by Col. Duff.

Despite enormous fortunes that have already been taken from the territory along the present and proposed lines of the Duff line, the surface has been but scratchy as concerns the untold wealth that might be yet taken from that country.

Traverse Route of Line
Trips over both the old Trinity and Sabine and the line from Livingston to Weldon were made last week in company with Col. Duff, Bill Smith, his assistant, A. M. Adcheson, his general manager, Bill Bradsher his cashier and Harry Kitcher the traffic man. Accompanying the party were Cap. J. Lewis Thompson, Houston, Banks and Bob Waite, of Beaumont.

Cap. Thompson with his brother are two of the largest landholders along the route of the WRTS and are also interested in a number of banks throughout that section.

Lumber for the lumberman, stone for the stonemason, rock for the road builder, clay for the brick manufacturer, cattle for the rancher and cotton for the planter are available within a stone's throw of the present lines of the road.

For the more sporty inclined game and fish abound in the timber lands and the creeks of the thousands of acres traversed by the Waco, Beaumont, Trinity and Sabine line.

Fish for m'str and face powder for m'dam illustrates the wide range of produce obtainable from these lands.

Already along the lines of the Duff projects there is an awakening in the industrial activities. Livingston is a wide awake, active community which is enthused to the nth degree over their prospects of the road.

When permission of the I. C. C. is granted Col. Duff to go ahead with his railroad from Livingston to West Port Arthur the road will connect up two communities each having a present population of more than 100,000 each.

Various phases of the work being done along the lines of the WRTS in the way of developing the vast amount of resources which have been allowed to lie dormant since the beginning of time, must be based on their nature to be dealt with in another article.

Resources of Great Value
The timber lands, virgin and cut over, the lignite deposits, Fuller's earth, talc, sandstone and the like in the natural resources are of untold value.

Gravel deposits, enough to furnish the refineries here with the necessary gravel to take care of expansion work for years to come lie undeveloped within 200 yards of the present lines of the WRTS road while enough rock is in quarry along the same route to complete dozens of jelly projects similar to the one at Sabine.

All this and more does the Duff road promise the world; what else is to follow, no one seems to know in view of the wide variety of products which can be grown on the lands adjacent to the railroad.

TEXAS LEADS ALL IN PRO CONVICTIONS
When it comes to "sticking" alleged liquor law violators the state of Texas is way ahead of the United States.

A resume of the operations this far in district court shows a number of fines had been assessed against persons convicted of liquor law violations, but a number also were freed.

Such fines are assessed in many instances in federal court, but in district court numerous sentences of more than one year have been doled out.

Miss Maude Hendrickson On Choral Club

Visit Rio Grande Valley Giving Programs

Miss Maude Hendrickson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Hendrickson, Port Arthur, is a member of the Choral Club of Baylor College for Women, Belton, which is now making its ninth annual tour. The club gave concerts in Austin and San Antonio before going into the Rio Grande valley for a two weeks' tour.

Miss Hendrickson is a sophomore in college and a member of the Historical-Philia Literary Society.

She is a member of the trio and sextet and sings the solo part in the first chorus on the program.

The Choral Club, which is composed of a chorus of 28 voices, reader and piano and violin soloists, is directed by Mrs. Alice Coleman Pierce, mezzo-soprano. Mrs. Pierce is a teacher of voice in Baylor college, and has been director of the Choral Club for four years.

The club will be on a tour 17 days and will give 20 concerts. Two programs are offered, sacred and secular. The secular program includes classical numbers, popular selections, and a group of negro dialect songs.

Miss Lorena Miller, Cooper, senior expression, will give readings at each concert.

"Well, I cut my yard decidedly to the point, young fellow, on this particular occasion to which I am about to refer. I had gotten in the same right off the jump. Fact is, I helped to start the thing off. And right from the first there was four negroes and a tutor that were in that same for blood. It was easy to tell that."

"Well, I contributed a back roll after an hour's shooting—mounted to something like a couple of hundred, I believe and I dropped out. Thought I just hang around a bit and watch those other boys contribute to the little speckled gold of greed that kept changing spots—so I did."

"Well, that didn't look just right, not good to me. I hated like thunder to sit there and watch that quintet, well off right off with my coin—so I countered out of the stable and went to the porch. I had a nail in there. He had a pair of dice that were tops and bottoms. Fact is, they were tops and bottoms to 11.

GULF CO. WINS RECOGNITION

Port Arthur Greatest Refin- ing Center in World

Recognition of Port Arthur as the largest oil refining center of the world is made in the Wednesday edition of the Wall Street Journal.

The article deals with the activities of the Gulf Oil Corporation going into the financial situation of the concern somewhat in detail.

The paper said:

"Gulf did a great deal in 1923 to strengthen its position in producing, marketing and refining departments, particularly the latter. Probably its largest work was the expansion and complete modernization of the Port Arthur, (Tex.) refinery on which about $13,000,000 was spent. Included in new facilities were about 100 new stills, new canning, grase and compounding plants, additional wharfage, power and water supply. It also maintained its lead as the country's largest casinghead gasoline manufacturer, six new plants in north Texas alone costing $2,500,000."

Port Arthur now is probably the largest single refining unit in the business handling 50,000 barrels a day with all modern equipment.

"Considering its general position in the oil trade, production of approximately 90,000 barrels of crude daily, refineries, tank cars, ships, marketing facilities and other equipment, this net valuation of plants is probably as conservative as any in the industry."

Murder Charge to Be Filed in Killing

Charges of murder will be filed Monday, according to Constable H. F. Baker, against Cornelius Millstead, negro, held in connection with the death Saturday morning of Lucille Latchler, also negro.

The Latchler woman was found in a dying condition from a number of knife wounds which the other negro admitted she inflicted.

It was said by officers last night that the affair grew out of a division of attention of a man here.

BANGERS SEIZE BEXAR STILLS

110 Taken As Result Of Campaign

By United Press

AUSTIN, Texas, April 12.—State rangers, since they started active operations in San Antonio September 1, 1923, capturing persons seven months have captured 110 illicit liquor stills in that city and Bexar county, besides several thousand gallons of beer, wine and whisky, according to the report of Captain H. C. Baldwin, commanding the company of rangers stationed in the Alamo City. More than a thousand barrels of mash were also seized and destroyed. Twelve automobiles used in transporting liquor were seized and turned over to federal authorities.

Complaints filed by rangers with the United States commissioner in San Antonio charging violations of the prohibition law number 230. More than 250 additional arrests were made for violation of the state laws.

U. S. Reclamation Work to Reorganize

By United Press

WASHINGTON, April 12.—Complete reorganization of federal reclamation work is "an imminent necessity," Secretary of Interior Work said today as he sent to congress the report of his special advisory committee which for several months has been studying the reclamation problem.

NEFF STUDIES M'ADOO SPEECH

May Recall Teapot Dome In Making Reply

AUSTIN, April 12.—Denying himself to all callers, Governor Neff this morning was in deep study of William G. McAdoo's Texas speeches, and it was ascertained that he would either prepare a formal statement in answer to some of the presidential candidates' remarks for immediate publication or withhold it to be used as the headliner in the speech which the governor will deliver at Cleburne next Monday night in opening his tour of the state in vigorous advocacy of the leading to the national democratic convention at New York of an unstructured delegation from Texas, representing "the progressive democrats."

No intimation came from the governor today as to what his reply to Mr. McAdoo will be. In capitol circles all were agreed that the McAdoo-Neff war is on and will be fought out to a finish; that the Texan will not recede an inch from his stand for an unstructured delegation. It was even hinted that the governor might go so far as to make some comment on the Teapot Dome scandal.

Neff Declines To Head Cadena Plea

By United Press

AUSTIN, April 12.—Attired in deepest mourning, two Mexican women who did not reveal their identity appeared at the governor's office today and sought a conference with the governor to urge the granting of a clemency of the death sentence given Frank Cadena, veteran of the world war, who killed his pretty 17-year-old sister-in-law, Pabila Jimenez, in San Antonio, two years ago. Governor Neff declined to give the women an audience at this time, saying that considerable time intervened between now and May 23, when the date set for the electrocution and that he would not consider the matter at this time.

Odds and Ends and Comment on Our Morning Mail

The pockets of small boys yield peculiar collectors. Maybe you read about nine-year-old Arthur Parker, knocked down and run over by a taxi. In his pockets they found 5 tops, 73 brass buttons, 60 marbles, 2 oranges, a wooden cigarette holder, a pair of clappers, 10 cigarettes, a mouth organ and a jew's-harp.

This will not surprise the mother of any healthy Port Arthur lad with normal tendencies. If there's anything amazing about Arthur Parker's pockets, it's that their contents didn't include a toad, a couple of white rats, a quart of bright pellets and several radio sets.

Spring is approaching, and boys are beginning to collect.

The small boy is close to the savage state. His mania for collecting odds and ends of "junk" is inherited from the savage, who adores himself with glass beads feathers, etc.

The instinct of accumulation asserts itself in the lowest forms of human life. Civilization makes it more intense.

This accumulative instinct separates us from the animals. Crows and rats sometimes gather and hide queer collections. But as a rule the animal accumulates only what is actually needed to sustain life.

The squirrel works scientifically, hoarding nuts but not any more than will be needed during the winter. The ant has his storehouse of food. So does the bee. But the purpose of their accumulation is to keep them alive when food is scarce.

Man alone tries to accumulate more than he needs.

The way people fight for money, you'd think they expected to be here on earth for at least several years. Does any of them ever get enough? Not so you can notice.

The savage with his glass beads the boy with pockets crammed full of trash, the rich man struggling to acquire wealth that he no longer needs—all three have much in common.

It is wise and necessary to provide for emergency, old age and a "better chance" for the children. But when we pass a certain point in accumulating, the quest becomes an obsession and life loses its color.

A large part of the misery, frustration, hatred and ill health of life is due directly to the mania for acquiring more wealth than we need. Life can be a very happy adventure and journey, if we enjoy ourselves as we go along instead of trying to hog everything in sight.

Thrift, carried to extremes, is a savage vice.

Eighteen thousand volts of electricity mean certain death. Yet 900,000 volts passed through J. V. Alfriend Jr., and he's still alive. This happened at John Hopkins University.

No one can satisfactorily explain why an overdose of "juice" may not occasion death, compared with a few thousand volts. Electricity is as mysterious as life, with which it seems to have some very close relation.

Several months ago T. McNeil, 427 Savannah avenue, electrical worker on the high tension line at New Orleans, received 33,000 volts and lived.

Electricians like these are exceptional. Young experimenters should be extremely cautious. Even the ordinary electric light socket is apt to kill, if the victim is grounded, probably in case of weak hearts.

What goes up must come down. This is true of stones, arrows and baseballs. Sometimes we're not so sure about prices, when seem to have a special gravitational law of their own.

However, Dan's Review reports that average wholesale prices in March dropped more than 2 per cent. How long until this will be reflected in Port Arthur in the cost of living, if ever? Two per cent may not seem much. But it means we cents on every dollar you spend.

A romantic Irish girl, Elizabeth King, 18, threw a slender green bottle into the ocean. Took 12 years to cross the Atlantic. The other day it was picked up on our eastern coast by a real estate man. He read the note inside. The girl had written that she hoped some day she would find it.

If she still is living, you can imagine her surprise when she hears from the real estate man or reads the story in newspapers.

She is now and may have forgotten all about the bottle. Things that seem crucially important in youth fade with the passing of the years.

Cities, say financial reports, have embarked on another big spending jag. More municipal bonds issues were authorized and sold during March than in any March since 1915. The total was over $8 million dollars.

Municipalities in our country are mortgaging the future, by new bonds, at the rate of more than a billion dollars a year. While a lot of this spending is for permanent public improvements, too much of it is not; and the expenditure is far beyond what can be afforded. It's like a man constantly spending more than he makes, and increasingly going into debt to pay the difference.

A show-down is inevitable. Will it come in the form of a taxpayers' strike?

$5 WORTH OF WINDJAMMING WINS OFFICIAL SIGNATURE WORTH $72,000

Aristotle, the famous Greek philosopher, once penned these words:

"And the rule of the law is preferable to that of any individual."

It is a pity that the Jefferson county commissioners did not read this bit of classic advice. And follow it.

It is a pity that the commissioners having failed to do so, Mr. DeWitt and his high powered attorney who painted such a glowing picture of the advantages to accrue to the people of Jefferson county through the expenditure of so mere a begatelle as $72,000 for a revised tax system could not have used some of their talent in letting these gentlemen know just what they were letting them in for. Perhaps they thought the commissioners knew what they were doing.

DeWitt has a perfectly good contract, in his opinion, on which he expects to collect. At any rate it is good at the bank.

Plainly the commissioners put individual rule above the rule of the law—all except, in due fairness, the commissioner from our own precinct 2—Mr. Hughes.

If they had been observing the law they would have advertised for bids before they acted.

If they had displayed wisdom they would have informed the public of their intentions before they acted.

The proceeding was too rapid for the public to follow. Mr. DeWitt was an eloquent talker. He talked away five dollars worth of time and so, he went away a short time later with a perfectly good signature affixed to a perfectly good contract obliging the county to pay $72,000—for what?

Something the taxpayers must foot the bill haven't had explained to them yet. Something about which there is a great deal of argumentation among men who make a business of knowing something about tax systems. Something that it required great deal of secrecy to award.

And, of some significance even in a county of so much wealth as Jefferson, something that it will take the courts to decide.

In the meantime we'll pass through an epidemic of hearings, injunctions, appeals and what not. The taxpayers will pay dearly in extricating the commissioners from a piece of folly, for which they already have paid them in salaries to keep out of.

But what is a little thing like law between friends?

JOHNSON SENT TO POLITICAL MORGUE

Senator Hiram Johnson of California has been sent to the morgue. He will never be president of the United States. He never will be the presidential nominee of any political party. Republican voters of three great states buried him alive in a single week.

Michigan led off by giving Coolidge 120,000 majority over the California contender. Johnson carried Michigan in 1920. Then Illinois, which had hoped to carry, dealt the Californian a smashing blow. Coolidge overwhelmed him. Came Nebraska, said to be honey combed with progressive republicans mad republicans, republicans crazy to follow the lead of a California Moses. What happened? The Californian was swamped and Coolidge gets the delegates. Michigan has thirty delegates. Illinois has fifty-eight, Nebraska sixteen, and all landed in the Coolidge camp. Since the first of April, Maine gave Coolidge twelve delegates, faraway Washington fourteen delegates. Rhode Island ten delegates, and as fast as the republican primaries are held the delegate plums fall into the Coolidge basket.

It Depends

By HAL COCHRAN

Say, whenever we mention bathtub in our little six-year-old, he starts to frown and fume and fight and fight. Perhaps some day, he'll quite enjoy the water, hot or cold, perhaps he will, but that bright day is not yet.

And when we ever talk about the washing of his heels, or mention the washing of his hands and face, soiled, this little tot just hollers, till his mother is a wren. Ah, yes, we must admit the child is spoiled.

You cannot tell a youngster that a bar of soap is fine; you can't convince that scrubbing does him good. At least that sort of chatter never seems to go with mine; he never uses soap just as he should.

But just the same this water fear is built into a rule, cause while the child at home will act that way, he changes absolutely, when he sees a swimming pool and in the pool he'll swim and splash all day.

Two lines, stretch half across the United States, from the mid-continent to Bayonne, N. J., where the tank steamers are loaded. The Sinclair and Standard Oil of Indiana companies recently completed a line from Casper, Wyo., to Kansas City, the first pipe line to tap the Wyoming trunk lines, which include the rich Salt Creek field and the matadorous Teapot Dome.

The Indians are among the very few persons who have won in the get-rich-quick game, they still it through buying lands that covered millions of dollars, worth of oil. The great corporations paid immense sums for leases from the Osages in Oklahoma and the Navajos in New Mexico and some other tribes.

Billions Are Invested

Andrew Carnegie said that the steel industry was either a prince or a pauper. He made his first money in oil and he probably would have described the petroleum industry as a great gamble. It is a sizeable game of chance, being capitalized for eight billions, with 16,000 busy producing and manufacturing companies, whose output keeps the wheels of all other industries running smoothly.

The biggest oil company is the Standard of New Jersey, with assets of a billion and a quarter. The Standard of New York and California each have assets of more than $200,000,000, while the Standard of Indiana, which operates in this territory has assets of about $325,000,000.

The Sinclair Co., and the Pan-American Petroleum and Transport Co., the Texas Co., and the Gulf Oil Corporation are among the leading oil companies.

Edward L. Doheny heads the Pan-American, while Andrew W. Mellon, secretary of the treasury, was the head of the Gulf until he took federal office.

Love Wins

Wealth or Love? Guess!

A "Big" Bargain

Romance

Lotus Thompson, recently proclaimed the prettiest girl in all Australia, has just arrived in this country. She's going to enter the movies. If you would be beautiful, here's her recipe: "Shun cigarettes and cocktails. Get plenty of out-of-door exercise."

No Hosiery Bills!

She was heiress. And he was a riding master. One day she went to the stable to arrange board and room for her horse. Soon they began taking long rides together. Romance had entered the lives of Elizabeth Keller, Cleveland society girl (above) and William Dunne (below), late of the U. S. army. Miss Keller's father's objections to the match was overcome when the son waived all rights to her property.

Wealthdom's Youngest Grandma

A Good Hand—500 Years Ago

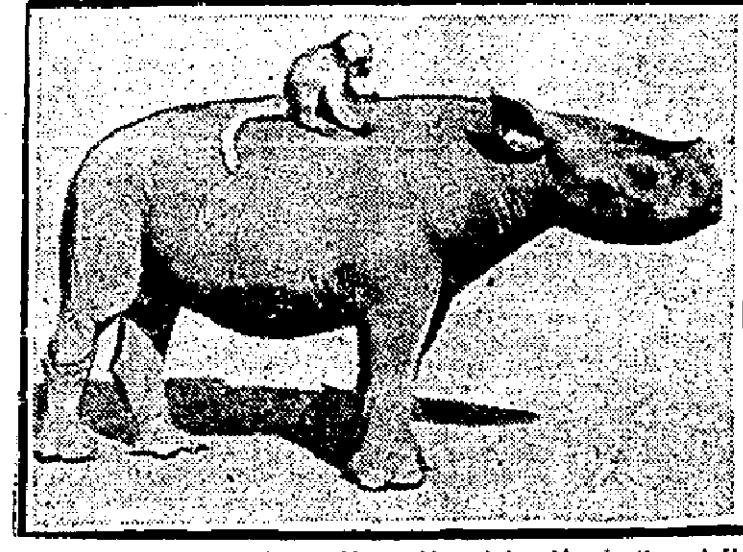

Leads Fight

Five hundred years ago Englishmen played with these cards. They were found by Burton Young of Lansing, Mich., in a chest shipped him from his ancestral home in Devonshire, England. They had lain in the unopened box for more than 100 years. The cards do not carry the symbols of today, except that they show clubs—pictures of real clubs.

Two Jungle Babes

A baby orang-outang takes a ride astride a baby rhino in Central East Africa. The two were caught by the Hungarian explorer, R. Kittenberger.

A girl employed in the Southern Pacific Railway offices in San Francisco came down to work minus stockings. The boss, who figured she'd just forgotten to put 'em on, suggested she go out and get a pair. She refused. And he fired her. Since then several employers have issued orders either in record or at variance with the railroad company's. Miss Madeline Burke herewith is illustrating both the new and the old styles.

Now May Wants Her Freedom

He's Held

Morris Neiman, 35, (left) druggist, is held on a mail-stealing charge in connection with the death of nearly a score of men following a "canned heat" party. He is accused of selling the distilled alcohol without properly labeling the bottles. Three of his clerks were arrested with him.

May Carr, the Venus who rises from the sea in the Winter Garden show, "Innocent Eyes," says her husband, Thomas Wright, was so jealous of her own innocent blue eyes he punched and choked her. And he just wouldn't work the charges.

Edna May, former actress, has instituted divorce proceedings in Los Angeles against her husband, Art Acord, movie cowboy. Instead of punching cows Art's been punching her, she charges. And he's utterly disregarded the "Volestead" act. Edna insists, as well as paying too much attention to a certain movie actress.

Port Neches Divided on Incorporation—Nederland Postal Exam's Hold Attention

HIGHER TAXES DUE, IS CLAIM

Chamber of Commerce Move Under Fire

Considerable opposition is being developed here in response to efforts of the committee appointed by the Chamber of Commerce to go into the question of incorporating this city.

Belief has been voiced here that increased taxation which will result from incorporation of the city will be too great to warrant the incorporation of the town.

A. C. Bigelow has been appointed to head the committee which is to investigate the proposal of incorporating the town and report back to the Chamber of Commerce. In addition to the chairman others on the committee are: G. C. Pierol, J. P. Tomberlin, W. E. Parsons, F. W. Nelson, John Bernard, B. Q. Blight, Sam Avery, Robert Bibb, Dr. J. G. Welch and George Welch.

Efforts will be made if it is understood to interest Nederland in the same proposition to incorporate the two towns into one city.

It is expected, however, that considerable difficulty will be experienced in bringing the three communities together.

The report of the Chamber of Commerce committee will be brought in Saturday.

T. C. Vice, of Port Neches, is a new member of Troop 4. Port Neches Boy Scouts, and Thomas Bluffin, also of Port Neches, passed tenderfoot tests before the Scout council Friday night when the boys gathered in Port Arthur park, at Port Neches, for a marshmallow roast, according to word to Port Arthur Scout headquarters Saturday.

Walter Boudreux of Troop 4, Port Neches, brought in the new member Friday night, Port Neches Scout officials reported here. The attendance at the outdoor meeting was 75 per cent of the troop's membership. Scout officials said.

Port Neches School Will Open on Monday

Port Neches men signed up for the course in the school for Scoutmasters opening there Monday night numbered 38 Saturday, and many more will sign up before the school opens its sessions in the Baptist church tabernacle, according to word received by Scout headquarters here.

The school at Port Neches will be in charge of Scout Executive David W. Eddy, assisted by Harold McCoard, and will be similar to a school for Scoutmasters recently conducted in Port Arthur at Franklin school, scout officials said Saturday.

Those who have signed up for the course to start on Monday night are as follows: Ladie Trainor, Walter Robert, Victor Nyst, Henry Delcomore, Leonard Bixby, Henry Christ, Rodney Christ, Chester Barrell, Edward Wright, Paul Gallier, Raymond Bourne, I. Indictments returned after a three-weeks' investigation set out that the brewery conspired to make and sell intoxicating liquor and that Prather agreed for money to give this liquor official protection. Griesdick previously had endorsed he paid about $15,000 at the rate of $1 a case to Prather for protection in the sale of alcoholic beer.

I.G. N. APPLIES TO ISSUE BONDS

WASHINGTON, April 12.—The International Great Northern railroad today applied to the interstate commerce commission for authority to issue or pledge or sell $1,500,000 of six per cent 30 year gold bonds. Proceeds are to be used to reimburse the company's treasury for expenditures made from December 1, 1922 to November 30, 1923, for additions and betterments to its lines.

NEGRO ADMITS SEVEN MURDERS

I'm Murderer' He Says, 'And Ready to Die'

NEWARK, N. J., April 12.—A negro held today for killing a negro who resisted him told the police he was guilty of ax and hammer murders in Birmingham, Chattanooga, Richmond, Chicago and Cleveland.

He claimed to have committed seven murders in those cities and five more:

"I'm a murderer all right and now I'm ready to die."

He gave the name of John Clark. Among other things Clark said he had:

Killed two persons in Georgia and was sentenced to prison for life in Chattanooga, Tenn.

Killed a convict in the penitentiary and escaped.

Murdered a woman with an ax in Richmond, in 1910, and another in Cleveland last year.

Killed at least one person in Birmingham and another in Chicago.

The negro said he had been committed to an insane asylum in Milledgeville, Ga., but had escaped.

A local police surgeon pronounced him sane.

Clark's Newark victim was Ella Nicholson. He claimed he killed her with an ax after she had resisted as assault.

The resolution further states that the boy has an expectancy in any estate Thaw may leave" by right of descent and that these rights should be protected.

The petition further states Thaw is mentally unfit and if released "will disinherit his own estate and the life interest in his father's estate."

Thaw has no legitimate son, he is Thaw's son and bears a striking resemblance to Harry.

The court has made no decision as to whether or not the petition will be allowed.

The resolution is the democratic substitute for the Pepper resolution authorizing the president to call a new disarmament conference.

Labor and Legion Back Berry as V. P. Candidate

By HARRY B. HUNT The News Writer

WASHINGTON, April 12.—When the executive council of the American Federation of Labor chose its candidate for the position of vice president on the democratic ticket, it picked a Berry!

"None other than George L. Berry, in fact, for 27 years president of the International Printing Pressmen's Union.

Berry hails from Lee Valley, Hawkins county, Tennessee. He was born 42 years ago, thirty miles from the nearest railroad, but moved to Jackson, Miss., where at the age of eight he helped get out the first edition of the Jackson Evening News. He's been helping put papers to press ever since.

At the age of 16, young Berry, who had never attended school, decided he'd like to read the things he was printing for other people's papers. So he learned to read and write. His self-education has progressed from that point.

An active campaign in support of Berry for a place on the democratic ticket is being waged both in organized labor and American Legion circles.

He served in the A. E. F. as a major in the transportation corps and was one of the group of veterans that met in Paris in February, 1919, when the organization of the Legion was first projected. In 1921 he was elected senior national vice commander at the legion's Kansas City convention.

A Great Man's Wife

Having Built Herself a Paradise, Cornelia Wisely Learned to Keep Her Eyes Upon the Stars.

WE learned in childhood that appearances are deceitful and our subsequent scrambling about upon this whirling globe has convinced many of us that the most deceptive of all appearances are those of peace. The genial looking figure upon the laboratory shelves was what removed the east wing of the chemical corporation's building on Christmas morning; it was the stiffest Sunday noon of a dreary August when, without even the courtesy of a little introductory sputtering, the gas works blew up; and both of these disturbances were thought to be peculiarly outrageous because of the previous sweet aspects that prevented any one from expecting trouble. Yet those aspects, like the flat calm of the summer of 1914, should have warned people of experience that outbreaks were impending.

What could offer to mortal eye a picture of more secure placidity than three smiling ladies walking homeward together after a club meeting? The particular three in mind were, moreover, in a visibly prosperous condition of life; for, although the afternoon was brightly cold, their furs afforded proof of expenditures with which any moderate woman would be satisfied, and their walk led them into the most luxurious stretch of the long thoroughfare that was called the handsome suburb's finest street. The three addressed one another in the carelessly amiable tones that so strikingly characterize the elite of their sex in converse; and their topic, which had been that of the club paper, was impersonal; in fact, it was more than impersonal, it was celestial. "Sweetness and Light, Esmy, Mrs. Roderick Brooks Battle!" these were the words printed in the club's year book beneath the date of that meeting, and Mrs. Roderick Brooks Battle was the youngest of the three placid ladies.

"You're all so sweet to say such lovely things about it," she said, as they walked slowly along. "I only wish I deserved them, but, of course, as every one must have guessed, it was all Mr. Battle. I don't suppose I could write a single connected paragraph without his telling me how, and if he hadn't kept helping me I just wouldn't have been ready with any paper at all. Never in the world!"

"O, yes, you would, Cornelia," the elder of the two other ladies assured her. "For instance, dear, that beautiful thought about the 'bravery of silence'—about how much nobler it is never to answer an attack—I thought it was the finest thought in the whole paper, and I'm sure that was your own and not your husband's, Cornelia."

"O, no, Mrs. Cromwell," Mrs. Battle returned; and, although her manner was sweetly deferential to the older woman, she seemed to be gently shocked; her voice became a little protesting. "I could never in the world have experienced a thought like that just by myself. It was every bit Mr. Battle's. In fact, he almost as much as dictated that whole paragraph to me, word for word. It seemed a shame for me to sit up there and appear to take the credit for it; but I knew, of course, that everybody who knows us the least bit ultimately would understand I could never write anything and it was all Mr. Battle."

"My dear, you'll never persuade us of it," the third lady said. "There were thoughts in your paper so characteristically feminine that no one but a woman could possibly—"

"O, but he could!" Mrs. Battle interrupted with an eagerness that was more than audible, for it showed itself vividly in her brightened eyes and the sudden glow of pink beneath them. "That's one of the most wonderful things about Mr. Battle; his intellect is just as feminine as it is masculine. Mrs. Dodge. He's absolutely—well, the only way I can express it is in his own words. Mr. Battle says no one can be great who isn't universal in his thinking. And you see that's where he excels so immensely: Mr. Battle is just absolutely universal in his thinking. It seems to me it's one of the great causes of Mr. Battle's success: he not only has the most powerful reasoning faculties I ever knew in any man but he's absolutely gifted with a woman's intuition."

Mrs. Cromwell evidently decided to slide away from it, for the time being at least. "I don't think Cornelia's looking well," she said. "She's rather lost her looks these last few years. I'm afraid. She seems pretty worn and thin to me; she's getting a kind of skinny look."

"What else could you expect? She's made herself the man's slave ever since they were married. She was his valet, his cook, and his washwoman night and day for years. I wonder how many times actually and literally she's blacked his boots for him! How could you expect her not to get worn out and skinny looking?"

"O, I know," Mrs. Cromwell admitted.

"But all that was in their struggling days, and she certainly doesn't need to do such things now. I hear he has twenty or thirty houses to build this year and just lately an immense contract for two new office buildings. Besides, he's generous with her; she dresses well enough nowadays."

"Yes," Mrs. Dodge said grimly. "They'd both see to that for his credit, but if he comes in with wet feet you needn't tell me she doesn't get down on her knees before him and take off his shoes herself. I know her! Yes, and I know him, too! Rich or poor, she'd be his valet and errand girl just the same as she always was."

"Perhaps," said Mrs. Cromwell. "But it seems to me her most important office for him is the one she's just been filling."

"Free agent? I should say so! She may stop blacking his boots, but she'll never stop that. It's just why she makes me so confused and tired, too! She thinks she's the only woman that ever got married!"

"Cornelia is rather that way," the other said musingly. "She certainly never seems to realize that any of the rest of us have husbands of our own."

"Mr. Battle can't be comprehended from knowing other men," Mrs. Dodge said. "Other men look at things simply in a masculine way, of course. Mr. Battle says that's only seeing half. Mr. Battle says women live on one hemisphere of a globe and men on the other, and neither can look round the circle, but from the stars the whole globe is seen—so that's why we should keep our eyes among the stars! I wanted to work that thought into my paper, too. Isn't it beautiful, the idea of keeping our eyes among the stars? But he said there wasn't a logical opening for it, so I didn't. Mr. Battle says we should never use a thought that doesn't find its own logical place—that is, not in writing, he says. But don't you think it's wonderful—that idea of the globe and the two hemispheres and all?"

"Lovely," Mrs. Dodge agreed. "Yet I don't see how it proves Mr. Battle has a masculine mind."

"O, but I don't mean just that alone," Mrs. Battle returned eagerly. "It's the thousand and one things in my daily contact with him that prove it. Of course, I know how hard it must be for other women to understand—I suppose they couldn't be expected to understand a god like my husband just from knowing their own poor little imitation husbands!"

"What an ideal!" The two ladies had been walking slowly as they talked; now they came to a halt at their parting place.

"has been denied to us, my dear."

Mrs. Dodge laughed at the consort of the marvels, so marvelous that she was herself so marvelous that she was herself so preoccupied. "I know, while Mrs. Dodge and Mrs. Battle stared with widening eyes at each other. "How often I—she went on, her own eyes curiously upon the distance where, in the distance, the two curbs of the long, straight street appeared to meet. "It's more and more to me how such a could have happened to a come little woman like me! I never understood why I should have been the selected."

THESE UPON being arrived at her own gate, it was with the time that she left them. From the gate a mottled flagstone led through a snow-covered lawn to a house upon which had charitably indulged his taste in stucco and wrought iron, and a Battle took her way over the flagstone received from her two friends a congratulation upon her easy as an expression of parting endearment; she replied to these cheerfully, but while the glowing, serious eyes of the little brown-haired woman remained fixed by the miracle she had mentioned.

Mrs. Cromwell and Mrs. Dodge, on their way with some solemnity, were silent until the closing door of the house let them know they were shot.

Then Mrs. Cromwell, using a husky voice, inquired: "Do you suppose she ever had a painting made of the Annunciation?"

"The Annunciation?" Mrs. Dodge did not follow her.

"Yes. When the miracle was announced to her that she should be the wife of Roderick Brooks Battle. Of course, she must have been forewarned by an angel that she was the one selected." If Battle had just walked in and proposed to her it would have been too much."

"I know one thing," Mrs. Dodge said emphatically. "I've stood just about as much of her everlasting 'Mr. Battle' says' as I intend to! You can't go anywhere and not away from it; you can hear it over all the chatter at a dinner; you can hear it over fifty women gabbling at a tea—Mr. Battle says this and that!" When Belloni was singing at the Fortnightly Afternoon Music last week you could hear her 'Mr. Battle' says' to all the women around her, even during that loud Puccini suite, and she tried Belloni on his way out, after the concert, to tell him Mr. Battle's theory of music. She hadn't listened to a note the man sang, and Belloni understands about two words of English, but Cornelia kept right on Mr. Battlesaysing him for half an hour! For my part, I've had all I can stand of it, and I'm about ready to do something about it!"

"I don't see just what one could do," Mrs. Cromwell said, laughing vaguely.

"I do!" her companion returned. Then both were silent for a few thoughtful moments, and wore the air of people who have introduced a subject upon which they are not yet quite warm enough to speak plainly.

Mrs. Cromwell evidently decided to slide away from it, for the time being at least. "I don't think Cornelia's looking well," she said. "She's rather lost her looks these last few years. I'm afraid. She seems pretty worn and thin to me; she's getting a kind of skinny look."

"What else could you expect? She's made herself the man's slave ever since they were married. She was his valet, his cook, and his washwoman night and day for years. I wonder how many times actually and literally she's blacked his boots for him! How could you expect her not to get worn out and skinny looking?"

"O, I know," Mrs. Cromwell admitted. "But all that was in their struggling days, and she certainly doesn't need to do such things now. I hear he has twenty or thirty houses to build this year and just lately an immense contract for two new office buildings. Besides, he's generous with her; she dresses well enough nowadays."

"Yes," Mrs. Dodge said grimly. "They'd both see to that for his credit, but if he comes in with wet feet you needn't tell me she doesn't get down on her knees before him and take off his shoes herself. I know her! Yes, and I know him, too! Rich or poor, she'd be his valet and errand girl just the same as she always was."

"Perhaps," said Mrs. Cromwell. "But it seems to me her most important office for him is the one she's just been filling."

"Free agent? I should say so! She may stop blacking his boots, but she'll never stop that. It's just why she makes me so confused and tired, too! She thinks she's the only woman that ever got married!"

"Cornelia is rather that way," the other said musingly. "She certainly never seems to realize that any of the rest of us have husbands of our own."

"Mr. Battle can't be comprehended from knowing other men!" Mrs. Dodge said. "Other men look at things simply in a masculine way!"

"I know, while Mrs. Dodge and Mrs. Battle stared with widening eyes at each other. "How often I—she went on, her own eyes curiously upon the distance where, in the distance, the two curbs of the long, straight street appeared to meet. "It's more and more to me how such a could have happened to a come little woman like me! I never understood why I should have been the selected."

"But isn't it what she meant? Isn't it exactly what she felt?"

"Well—perhaps."

"IT does make me tired!" Mrs. Dodge said vigorously, and with the repetition she began to be more than vigorous. Under the spell of that rumor which increases in people when they mull over their injuries, she began to be indignant. "For one thing, outside of the shamelessness of it, some of the rest of us could just possibly find a few enthusiastic things to say of our husbands if we didn't have some regard for not boring one another to death! I've got a fairly good husband of my own I'd like to mention once in a while, but—"

"But of course, you'll never get the chance," Mrs. Cromwell interrupted. "Not if Cornelia's in your neighborhood when you attempt it."

"What I can't understand, though," Mrs. Dodge went on; "it's her never having the slightest suspicion what a nuisance it is. I suppose the man himself would stop her."

But Mrs. Cromwell laughed and shook her head. "In the first place, of course, he agrees with her. He thinks Cornelia's just stating facts—facts that ought to be known. In the second, don't you suppose he understands how useful her press agenting is to him?"

"But it isn't it makes us all sick of him."

DRYDEN PLACE

PORT ARTHUR'S MOST BEAUTIFUL
RESIDENTIAL SECTION

The citizens of Port Arthur are fortunate in having one of the finest places in Jefferson county to build their stately homes. Beautiful in its layout, complete in its construction; cement walls, curbs, good streets, good drainage, gas, water, private sewer, ornamental entrance, beautiful underground lighting system, three esplanades, lots of big shrubbery, all ready for the home of your dreams. All this was made possible by George E. Dryden, who, although he is not a resident of Port Arthur at present, still has the city at heart and is interested in its future growth and development. He has contributed this as his part in the building-up program which will place this city along with some of the best in the South.

Turning back the pages of city's history to the years 1903 and 1906 when the place was a little country town and the P. A. Townsite Company owned most everything in and around the place. They had the McHanks Subdivision to the City of Port Arthur, which is now the 5-acre tracts upon two of which "DRYDEN PLACE" has been laid out. This piece of ground was cut up into five-acre tracts and sold for about $1,700 per tract, with a further restriction that it could not be subdivided for about 25 years from date of sale. The city has grown out to these tracts and our paved County Highway runs alongside of them and there has been a lot of talk and speculation as to whether this valuable property would be opened up. During Mr. Dryden's visit here last summer he studied the situation over and made up his mind to set his two tracts released and open up a real place for houses to be built.

Satisfactory terms were made with

Mr. Bunge, manager of the Holland Hypothec bank the successors to the Port Arthur Townsite company, and a release of this subdivision clause was secured. His plans were turned over to Griffing Nursery Landscape department, and they got up an elaborate layout and beautification scheme and DRYDEN PLACE soon began to become a realization.

The services of Chas. W. Hughes was secured to draw up specifications for walks, curbs, sewers, etc., and survey lots. It was not long before things were moving along, and have been moving ever since, for the past five months, with each day's work getting things a little farther, until at present the place is almost completed, with the exception of some grading and rolling of the streets, and the completion of the water and gas mains which are now being laid, and some more shrubbery which is to be set out. Everything should be finished within the next two or three weeks.

C. L. Wierau, local architect, designed the front entrance which is made of Norwegian Grey Granite, which is part of a series of granite blocks which was auctioned off about a year ago by the local custom authorities. The name DRYDEN PLACE will be set in the panel on the front in S' bronze letters, and a vase will be set on the columns on each side of the walk, thus completing the design.

The lighting system installed by Frank Stoneburner of the Electric Supply Co., has all the wiring underground in lead-covered cables in galvanized pipes, thus making it waterproof and fixed so it will stand for years. This is something new for the city, being the first system of its kind installed here, and adds quite a bit of beauty to the place, besides furnishing light at night.

The street has been excavated gradually toward the canal until there is about an 18 or 24-inch cut, and affords good drainage, as well as giving the lots near the canal a nice terrace effect, which is something rare in our city, owing to the flatness of the ground.

There is a large storm sewer at each side of the street on the canal to take off the water and run it into the canal. Drains have been placed in all the lots and when opened up will take care of the hardest rain in a few hours. Thirty ears of shell were used in the construction of the boulevard and when this is rolled down and packed hard it will be there for years to come, as there will not be any heavy traffic on these streets to cut it up, being strictly a residential place.

Private sewer is on the rear of each lot and the owners will be exempt from paying sewer dues each month. Service wires for telephones and electric lights will be placed on the rear ten feet of each lot, thus leaving the front clear of all obstructions, except for the beautification scheme of the long rows of palms and the paintings in the three esplanades.

The entire landscape and planting contract was given the Griffing Nurseries of this city and Beaumont. The Griffing Nurseries have been very prominent in the development of this and other sections of the south.

Mr. George M. Campbell, a distinguished horticulturist of long experience in both commercial and ornamental planting throughout the Southwest, has superintended the execution of the plan from the preparation of the soil until the last plant was properly placed and planted. The addition will be under his supervision for some time and the maintenance and care of the plants will be closely followed by him in order to attain the most satisfying results and obtain the landscape effects with the minimum of time.

The Griffing Nurseries have given their guarantee and should the growth of the plants fail to satisfy their buyers, the will be replaced, thus insuring the buyer of property in the addition that no part of the landscape effect will be deficient from this cause.

The reaction of such intensive development as has been followed in Dryden Place is visible in many other instances. Interest in the addition is being manifested on every hand.

The Griffing Nurseries have shown the property to many visiting landscape architects, nurserymen, and horticulturists. In every instance it has met with loud praises. Dryden Place will be a Garden Suburb unrivaled in beauty and desirability.

The services of an attendant for the place have been arranged for the first year by Mr. Dryden, to insure the starting of the lawns between the sidewalks and curbs, and the caring for the shrubbery so that it will get a good start. In addition to this the grass will be kept down on the lots, and everything will be kept spic and span at all times. All shrubbery which is growing and in healthy condition by Sept. 1st of this year will be replaced by Griffing Nurseries under their contract. However, from the looks of the way it is coming along there won't be much to replace, as it is putting out leaves all over, and with the coming of warm weather it will make a much bigger showing. Just picture this place, say five years from now, with nice homes built in it and the shrubbery all up and large.

It will be a garden spot that any city would be glad to have in its limits.

The canal frontage has been re-veted with cement placed in sacks and given a gradual slope which makes quite an attractive waterfront, besides affording protection from the wash of the vessels plying back and forth.

The lots are much larger than the ordinary city lots and the homes will be set back 50 feet from the sidewalks thus giving a deep front lawn and making the distance between the front of opposite houses 194 feet. The lots are 170 feet deep, with a ten-foot basement on the rear for service rooms, etc.

The lots on the canal carry with them a deed to a strip of ground under water measuring 40 by 270, which will make a nice place for private boat houses, etc. It is quite likely that several of the purchasers will take advantage of the nonness to the waterfront and have their private launches and speed boats parked there.

The minimum building requirements

call for homes costing $4000 or better.

However, it is quite likely that they will all be of the better type, as there are several planned for the near future which run from $8000 to $30,000 in cost.

W. A. Martin, president of the Martin Lumber company, has the distribution of purchasing the first two lots in this beautiful addition, having required two lots next to the canal on the west side. This gives him a frontage on the boulevard of 160 feet and a depth of 170 feet. Mr. Martin will begin the erection of a $12,500

home within the next two weeks. Mr.

Geo. R. Faircloth drew the plans for this beautiful home.

Mr. W. J. Burch is looking after

Mr. Dryden's interest and has charge of the improvements going in and the sale of the property. He has resided in Port Arthur for the past 24 years and feels proud that he is connected with this addition to Port Arthur, and plans to make his home in Dryden Place before long.

MICHIGAN CITY WILL WITNESS BIG MATCH

LAPORTHE, Ind., April 12.—That Floyd Fitzsimmons expects to stage a bout in Michigan City on July 1, matching the winner of the Carpenter-Turney match with Tommy Gibbons, has developed with the announcement that Fitz will start work on the Michigan arena this week.

It is the plan of Fitzsimmons to provide seating space for 50,000 fight fans. He expects to have the big bowl ready not later than the middle of June. With assurances from Governor McCray that there will be no executive interference with an exhibition bout, the promoter will go ahead with his plans to make Michigan City the mecca for boxing fans on Independence day.

With Stokes pitching for the Bull Dogs and Stan Falk for the Austin High, the game should be mainly a battle of the pitchers.

Tom Gibbons To Box Carpenter In Indiana City

NEW YORK. April 12.—Tom Gibbons, St. Paul heavyweight challenger, and Georges Carpenter, former French ring idol, have been matched to meet in a 10-round no-decision fight at Michigan City, Indiana, on May 30, or 31.

After a skirmish of more than a week with eastern rivals, Floyd Fitzsimmons, Chicago promoter, secured cables acceptance of terms for the May date from Francois Descamps, manager for Carpenter.

The articles are to be signed in a few days by a representative of Fitzsimmons in Paris and the full details will be announced. It has been known confidentially for several days that the match was on, but the news did not leak out until today.

Several weeks ago Fitzsimmons announced that he had signed Gibbons and Carpenter to meet for his club on July Fourth, and he showed a cable dated March 12, signed by Descamps in which his terms were accepted.

Posts $15,000 Purse

Fitzsimmons posted a forfeit of $15,000 and came here to discuss the details of the match with Jack Curley, New York representative of the Frenchman.

Before the details had been arranged, Billy Gibson, manager of George Turner, American light heavyweight champion, called and articles sent to Paris in which Carpenter agreed to meet Turner during the week of June 10.

Claims Contract Priority

Fitzsimmons claimed priority of contract and offered $150,000 for the contract but Curley refused to consider a release and asked Gibbons to dispose of the match to some promoter. Fitzsimmons then threatened to get an injunction to restrain Carpenter from accepting any match before he fought Gibbons.

As a compromise, Curley suggested that the date for the proposed Carpenter-Turner match be advanced and that the winner of that contest be signed to meet Gibbons in Michigan City on July Fourth.

Turner Not So Good

Fitzsimmons protested that Curley would not be as good a card as Carpenter would, that the edge would be taken off the Frenchman if he had appeared in another fight and that he wouldn't have time to advertise Gibbons' opponent. He finally stated that he would accept the terms only after he had been given time to understand that it would not be possible for Fitzsimmons to stage the Gibbons fight. When it was learned that several cables knocking the Gibbons-Carpenter fight had been sent to Curley and that he had accepted the terms offered him for Turney only after he had been given time to understand that it would not be possible for Fitzsimmons to stage the Gibbons fight, it was learned that several cables knocking the Gibbons-Carpenter fight had been sent to Curley and that he had accepted the terms offered him for Turney only after he had been given time to understand that he is certain to leave within a few weeks.

Not to Quit Ring

Reports cabled to the United States that Gibbons had decided to retire from the ring never were taken seriously here and it was considered certain that he would seek more big money matches in the United States by all who have been in intimate touch with him.

Expect Big House

Fitzsimmons when he was here said he figured the match would draw at least $500,000 in the middlewest and that he had received so many advanced orders when the match was announced that he knew he could offer Carpenter the best proposition. The new terms offered him were not made known.

Gibson said tonight he would seek an injunction to restrain Carpenter if he tried to meet Gibbons or any other opponent before he fills the contract he signed to meet Turney.

Dempsey and His $1,000,000 Fist

By JOE WILLIAMS

STEP this way, ladies and gents, and gaze upon the world's first million-dollar fist, the property of John Harrison Dempsey, heavyweight champion of the prize ring.

Please note that aside from its rather robust dimensions and hard, leathery aspects, this fist is not an unusual specimen.

You have seen larger fists on icemen and iron workers. Now that you recall it, the butcher's fist that yields the cleaver at the corner store is certainly more terrifying.

And yet here is a fist—this one of Dempsey's—that towers joints and knuckles above all the fists in the history of the world. For it is the first fist that ever earned a million dollars.

What Other Fists Drew Down

There have been other remarkable fists in the past. The ham-like fist of the great John L. which wrote the introductory chapters of man-fighting in America, the bone-crushing fist of old Fitzsimmons, the high-speed geared fist of the primitive Jeffries.

BILLY EVANS SAYS

Coincident with the start of the baseball season, the major league scouts will dust off their gun-sheath and start on his annual ivory hunting expedition.

The baseball scout has become one of the most valuable assets of a big league ball club. On the success of a baseball Sherlock Holmes to dig up promising material largely hinges the success of a club.

In these days of high tension baseball and close races, the scouts are compelled to work fast and often use snap judgment.

That is perhaps one reason why some players who look anything but promising material, get a chance. The snap judgment of the scouts has resulted in his striking one.

The baseball scouts are of different types. There are some who think to earn their salary they must dig up a lot of recruits. Others who work on the theory they are saving their employer a lot of money by keeping him away from the recruits who have little more than an outside chance.

I know one major league scout who in one year of service didn't send over a dozen players to the club that employed him. A majority of these made good.

In a number of cases his opinion kept his club owner from bidding for a reputed star who never amounted to anything.

Just what a tough proposition a big league scout is up against was proved to me in a recent conversation with one of the best ivory hunters in the American League.

Present just what a tough proposition a big league scout is up against was proved to me in a recent conversation with one of the best ivory hunters in the American League.

The scout had been detailed to watch a certain player in the Southern Michigan League. The organization is now known as the Michigan-Indiana League. The player in question was with the Jackson (Mich.) club.

It seems Sardinia, Mich., was the opposing club and to the best of the scout's recollection, Robbins was the pitcher for that team.

Robbins shot out the Jackson team without a hit. The player the scout came to watch was an easy victim for Robbins' curves.

Instead of resting on his glory, Robbins came back the next day and again pitched a shutout game in which not a hit was made. He struck out 14, the recruit the scout was watching fanning three times.

The scout was convinced the outfielder who had been recommended to him wasn't ready, but he was up in the air about this fellow who was good enough to pitch two no-hit games in succession.

"Snap judgment told me to sign the pitcher on the strength of those two no-hit games. Only the fact that a fancy price was asked caused me to pass up the proposition," explained the scout.

"I didn't like the pitching motion of Robbins, and I could see that he had been a bad fielder. However, he had been averaging a strikeout an inning for about 30 games."

"Finally I decided I didn't want the pitcher or outfielder and went on my way, but not without considerable misgivings for I had pulled a bone."

"Guess I didn't, as Robbins, as far as I know, never reached the majors. However, those two no-hit games were an awful bait for my snap judgment."

BROOKLYN NINE DEFEATS YANKS

Robins Come From Behind,

Score in Ninth

NEW YORK. April 12.—Playing their first game before a New York audience since they became the champions of the world, the New York Yankees disappointed a crowd of 15,000 this afternoon when they were beaten by the Brooklyn Robins by a score of 10 to 8.

The Robins came from behind and scored five runs in the ninth inning. Deacon Scott and Wally Pipp hit homers for the Yanks and Jack Fournier hit one for the Robins.

It is understood, gave Hugh Garland, who sailed a few days ago for the United States, the authority to accept tentatively any good offers that were made to him by American promoters. Fipp apparently is charged at his failure to outwit Tex Rickard in the battle of wits that they have waged for several months and he feels humiliated that Rickard ignored him by sending transportation money to Quintin Romero and Ermino Spalla, two players who Fipp regards as being much below his class.

GREAT CURVE BALL

By Cobb says that he regards the veteran George Davis of the Tiger staff as the best curve ball pitcher in the American League. Some praise.

CASE DOUBTFUL

Baseball experts who have seen George Sisler perform in the south are skeptical as to his chances to play regularly. There are some who don't think he will even start.

But none of these fists had more than an elementary training in the art of money-making, and they were handicapped further by having flourished in the days of meager purses. Already the Dempsey fist has made almost twice as much as all the other heavyweight champions combined!

Sullivan and Corbett fought for a purse of $20,000. Corbett and Fitz fought for $15,000, winner take all. Fitz fought Jim Hall for $50,000 in 1893, the largest purse offered up to that time. Offered is a better word than paid, for when Fitz went to collect the check was worthless.

MILLION DOLLAR PURSE

Dempsey will demand $700,000 for a return date with Firpo and a cool million for a Wills bout, and the probabilities are he will get draw big, a Wills fight will draw even bigger.

The million-dollar fist is on the threshold of a golden harvest. It has already brought Dempsey a million from the prize ring. It is now bringing him another million in the motion picture studios by virtue of a recent contract.

Pending bouts promise still another million or two.

The 29-year-old champion has a chance to run his bank balance up to five million before he quits, or is knocked off.

Since then, however, Rickard has paid Dempsey something like a million dollars in cash for meeting Brennan, Carpenter, and Firpo, and he is now eager to pay him another million, and then some, to renew the Firpo feud and follow it up with Harry Wills, the giant hero, who has been long clamoring for a crack at the crown.

Cleveland made fourteen hits to the Reds' eight. The score was 4 to 3. Uhle pitched the entire game for the Indians. Burns, of Cleve, knocked one over the left field fence in the fourth, one of the few times such a long hit ever has been made at the local park.

Cardinals, One-Man Ball Club, on Decline in National Loop

Hornsby is Only Prominent Man In Missouri Nine

BY HENRY L. FARRELL

United Press Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK, April 12.—With just an ordinary ball club, not too good and not so terribly bad—the St. Louis Cardinals failed to make the first division in the National League last year after they had been pennant contenders over a stretch of several seasons.

There have been many reasons attributed for the decline of the Cardinals, chief among which has been the failure of the club to keep up on its pitching. The Cardinals last season fell off in hitting and next to the Brooklyn Robins they were the loosest fielding team in the league.

With Rogers Hornsby, the Cardinals are almost one-man team, although they are not so much dependent upon an individual as the Browns have been. Hornsby is one of the greatest players in the game and with the possible exception of Frank Frisch, the young Giant second baseman, is the most valuable player in the National League.

Hornsby won the batting championship last season but his value to the club was depreciated somewhat to the club because of some differences that resulted from a row with the management. He played in only 107 games of the schedule and refused to play late in the season when he claimed he had a bad knee.

Hornsby Makes Peace

Since the close of the season, when Hornsby was reported to have said that he would never play again for Branch Rickey, he is reported to have made peace with his manager and it is his belief that he will be of much more use to the club this year.

Malton S. Stock, veteran third baseman, did not report to the club this year. He insists that he will not play unless he is transferred to some other club. In his place, Rickey is using Herbert Bell, a youngster, who was developed in the extensive school the club maintains in the minor leagues.

May Replace Stock

Stock had slipped back greatly and it is quite possible that Bell may play well enough to make the veteran's services only slightly missed.

The veteran Doc Javay probably will be replaced at shortstop by Freigau, another young player who was picked up from an Ohio college diamond. He looked like a fine prospect last season and ought to be an improved player this year.

Hornsby, of course, will play second base and first will be handled by Jim Bottomley, who has developed almost神奇ly since Hickey brought him in from the outfield.

Team Needs Catcher

The team is in desperate need of catchers and it is probable that a deal will be made with some other club before the season has gone far.

The pitching staff consists of James Dickey, Bafford, Pfeffer, Stump, North and Slaughter. Manager Biden is looking upon Dickey to have a big season this year and he is expecting a lot from Slaughter, who slipped to the minor leagues because he couldn't field bats.

The Cardinals have not been impressive, while it is certain that they will be far better competition this year than they did last year.

WESTERN INDOOR TOURNEY ON SOON

DETROIT, April 12.—The western indoor tennis tournament which will get under way April 19 has a fine list of entries. The following have indicated their intentions of taking part in this tournament: C. Merkle, western conference champion; E. Frisch, University of Michigan; A. Burke, K. Morrell, Carl Gravu, Phil Johnson, present city indoor champion; J. Summersville, J. Smith, J. Townsend and a number of others.

Indoor tennis is especially valuable in the spring of the year as it gives the player an opportunity to get in shape for the outdoor season much quicker than they would if they layed off now and then when the weather permitted during the early part of the year.

FOR HIS NAME

For years the name of Bush has astured American League pitchers, Joe Bush, a New York Yankees, has long been a star. Guy Bush, a Chicago Cub rookie, hopes to step in the shoes of Bush in the line-up. He is the best of the young pitchers picked up by Manager Bill Defer.

BOBBY LOOKS FINE.

The disagreement that still exists between Mortenson Holloman and the manager as to Second Baseman Grampian's condition, offers a big opportunity for some of the young infielders in working out with the Chicagoans at Catalina Island Calif. Among the promising "bushers" is Bobby Fink, utility infielder, who hit better than .300 for Wichita Falls in a Texas League last season.

ICKARD WANTS FLYNN

Insiders hear that Tex Rickard has asked Leo Flynn to return as manager at Madison Square Garden, take the position Flynn must ask favors on his large stable of boxers among whom is Jack Renault, heavyweight. It is not considered likely Flynn will accept.

It's Harder to Spar With Books Than Gloves, Says Fighter, 19, Out for Championship

BY STEVE HANNIGAN
NEA Service Staff Writer

NEWARK, N. J., April 12.—

"Sparring with books is harder than sparring with gloves. But it's more important."

So says William Lawrence Stribling, Jr., 19-year-old sensation of the prize-fight ring, as he is getting in trim to bathe his way to a championship so that he can have the chance to make the grade at college.

And his whole family has come up from Georgia to help him. His daddy is his manager and trainer, his mother his nurse and dietitian, his Uncle Hoy his tutor of book learning and spiritual advisor, and his 17-year-old brother, his sparring partner and pal de luxe.

Mother Still Spansks Him

"He is a mighty fine son," offered his mother, "and we aim to keep him that way. He may have a destructive swing in the ring, but he's not too big to take over my knee for a good spanking, even though he is 3 feet 11 inches tall and weighs 165 pounds."

Then she demonstrated the fact for the doubting photographer.

"He is advancing rapidly in his studies," explained Uncle Hoy, who gave up business in the South to travel with the Stribling troupe. "Another teacher will join us within two weeks and within a few months he will be ready to enter college."

There was a southern accent that suggested crinoline and all the main songs of a decade in the construction of the Stribling clan.

After the mid-day conference in their hotel suite, the Stribling crew went to the gymnasium where Young Stribling went through a routine that would make any 10-year-old envious.

He skipped the rope, shadowboxed, beat a tattoo on a dummy, and then with healthy perspiration dripping from his perfectly proportioned body he sparred several rounds with a husky, human punching bag.

But after his rub-down he went back to his rooms and his school books and sparred with the agile mind of his Uncle Hoy for an hour and a half.

"He enjoys his books as much as his boxing gloves," said Uncle Hoy. "That's saying a lot."

COULDN'T FIND THE NEW VOLCANO

ANCON, Canal Zone, April 12.—

A scientific expedition sent from San Jose, Costa Rica, to investigate the reported new volcano in Mount Turribares, between San Jose and Puntarenas, has reported that they were all over the Turribares region and found nothing extraordinary in the aspect of Mount Turribares, or any trace of a new volcano.

Volcano reports are a natural concomitant of severe earthquake periods. During the worst of the Guatemala quakes of January, 1918, which came on a moonlight night, members of the harassed and terrified populace saw "a new mountain" on the horizon, and throngs were overwhelmed by the "miracle." When morning broke the mountain was seen to be the roof of a house in the suburbs, rising against the sky line.

THE EGRET MAKING ITS LAST STAND

CHAPEL HILL, N. C., April 12.—

The egret is making its last stand in the United States at Crane's Neck, the bird sanctuary on the Orton plantation, near Wilmington. A few pairs of the birds formerly nested at Lake Ellis, in the eastern part of the state, and a single pair at another point, but these fell victim to plume hunters.

They also want to see duties placed on Russian and American grain so that they can still live in opulence on their almost feudal estates in the east and north.

That tells a large part of the story of what is happening in Germany. The people are told that these nationalistic heroes are going to "save them" from Marxism, Semitism, they have skillfully concealed, however, certain selfishly greedy motives of their own which are destined to make already high prices in Germany still higher.

Behind the false "patriotic" utterances of the alleged saviors of the Vaterland stands a plan to put into effect the duties wherunder Junkerdom and industrialism waxed wealthy before the war.

That such protection is needed can scarcely be maintained. But the German junkers have become accustomed through the years to special favors and to high prices. Moreover, the industrialists want certain machinery barred and want to be able to dump onto the world's markets. Hence the secret plans for high tariffs once the ultra's win.

TRIFLED HIS TIME
A clergyman was examining a boy in a Sunday school class with regard to John the Baptist. The boy's knowledge of the prophet was very scant.

At last the clergymen said, "Surely you can tell me what he did?"
"He didn't do nothing," said the boy. "He was a preacher." — Tit-Bits.

Miss Helen Crum To Be First Bride Of Coming Season

WEDDINGS and rumors of weddings—the culmination of delightful romances—fill the social calendar, the announcements being followed by a bevy of parties.

With the advance of the Lenten season, however, few social affairs may be expected save those of quiet nature which have informality as the keynote. Following the advent of Easter on April 20, the season will be decidedly gay with a large dance scheduled for April 21 at the Department Club, an old fashioned concert sponsored by the Symphony Club at the Department Club on April 24, a brilliant wedding on that same evening, and the days coming after filled with hospitalities for brides-to-be, whose weddings come in late May or early June.

Thursday Wedding Interests

For the coming week, though, Port Arthur society is anticipating the lovely wedding of Miss Helen Crum, attractive daughter of Mrs. W. H. Crum, and the late Rev. Crum, to Charles C. Perry, which will be an outstanding event of Thursday. The wedding will be solemnized at the First M. E. church, South, on the evening of April 17 at 6 o'clock, the affair being the first of its nature in the new auditorium of the church. The impressive services will be read by Rev. V. A. Godfrey, pastor of the First M. E. church, South.

The auditorium will be in lovely adornment for the beautiful wedding, and the chancel will be a veritable bower of blossoms, forming a setting of unusual beauty for the dainty gowns of the feminine members of the bridal party. A delicate motif of lavender, orchid and pale green, will be interwoven in all details of the wedding and displayed in the gowns of the bride and her attendants, their delicate beauty showing beneath the glow of many candles.

To Wear Unusual Gown

Miss Crum's gown will be a departure from the usual mode and will be an exquisite creation of orchid-georgette with trimmings of gold lace. She will carry an arm cluster of gorgeous blossoms.

Her maid, Mrs. W. D. Rhinehart, will serve as matron of honor and will be attired in a lovely gown of delicate green georgette. Imprisoned in Wheel Chair, Murder Cripple, 69, Gloats Over Bloody Deed

MIND POISONED BY SUSPICIONS

Envied Health Members Of Own Family

By ALEXANDER HERMAN
The News' Special Writer
NEWARK, N. J., April 12.—Here is a tragedy of a life without an outlook—a tragedy that has left in its wake a young man dead; a young woman broken; an old mother, shattered, and an old father, held for murder.

For years Martin Wright, 69, and crippled, had been imprisoned in a wheel chair. Life passed him by. He couldn't join it. His ailment wouldn't let him. He could only sit by, watch and think.

He lost all outlook. He had only "in-look"—retrospection, brooding... and then bitterness and jealousy.

One day was pretty much the same as another. There were no highlights in his life.

Up in the morning... Into his chair... Grouchy, grumpy... All day long... Then night with its long vigil for insomnia... And the inevitable cycle all over again.

He would watch 24-year-old Edward Hallock, who boarded with his family, bustle by each morning and breeze off to work. He would watch his daughter, Mrs. Mina Egbert, greet him joyfully, and go off laughing.

It riled the old man. Why should he be robbed of the joys that were theirs?

He watched his wife, Hannah, busy herself making breakfast—serving the young folk first. He thought he detected signs of too much familiarity between the young man and his family. He didn't like it and said so.

Quarrels made his unhappiness the greater, and increased his suspicion.

And then he saw love spring into the hearts of the youth. Hallock was strong and kindly; Mina, pretty, yet dissatisfied. For her marriage hadn't been a happy one, and she had left her husband three years ago.

The old man tried to stop them. But love, like life, just passed him by.

More brooding... more suspicion... He thought he detected signs of too much friendliness and not only between the young man and his daughter, but his wife, too.

Groundless, though these fears were, they preyed on Wright's mind. He came to hate the very sound of Hallock's voice. He writhed in mental anguish at the very thought of his name.

The condition became a frenzied one. Something had to give. It did.

When young Hallock was killed by a perfectly aimed shot one morning, as he crossed the threshold of Wright's room.

The police say the old man did it, and seemed glad of it.

His wife says she found him with the revolver still smoking.

His daughter, says he tried to kill her, too.

But she doesn't seem to worry much about her father's fate. Her chief concern seems to be the loss of a happiness that might have been hers.

Had the old man's in-look on life taken a different turn.

THIRD PARTY MAY WIN OUT

Many Surprises in Store For The Politicians

By CHARLES P. STEWART
The News' NEA Writer

WASHINGTON, April 12.—The third party movement took shape in Washington very rapidly.

Policemen now are generally assuming that Senator LaFollette will head the ticket. That is, they still take it for granted that President Coolidge will be nominated by the Republicans and that this will mean LaFollette's entrance into the race.

Maybe the third party element intended all along to uncover presidential plans when they considered the time ripe, but it is the common opinion that they themselves were surprised into it by revelations connected with the Daugherty investigation.

These revelations, it is agreed, were much more damaging to the old parties than the oil exposure.

It's true, the Daugherty case has hit the Republicans rather than the Democrats, but the oil case already had set the public to thinking of the two big parties as about equally involved.

And, whereas the oil exposures were confined pretty much to OIL, the Daugherty case goes into nearly every branch of governmental.

That some of the stories told by witnesses are doubtful and that a great deal of the testimony has been of a character which wouldn't stand up in court, as hearsay and surmise is recognized; all the same, it's been published, the public has read it and,

ATHENS, Texas, April 12.—One hundred and sixty-two fish nets were removed from Caddo Lake, when Both Republicans and Democrats would be glad to stop it, but the third party group is in a position to PREVENT it from being stopped.

Until very lately, even the third party boosters had not suggested the possibility that the nomination of a presidential ticket, on their part, would do more than create a condition of desperate uncertainty between the Republicans and Democrats, perhaps to the extent of throwing the selection of a president into Congress.

Now there's some speculation concerning the bare possibility of a third party victory.

Exploration Object

Amundsen's flight has only one object: Exploration. By his flight he hopes to add valuable information to the scientific data which will be secured by the Maud on her long drift.

Much has been said and written about the possible discovery of an Arctic continent. The faith in the existence of such a continent was much stronger a few months ago than it is today, as Dr. H. U. Sverdrup, the eminent scientist of the Maud expedition, has stated in his latest wireless reports that his oceanographic researches would go to disprove the theory of such a continent.

Would Be Valueless

But even should a continent be found it could not possibly have any practical value as it would be absolutely impossible except by an air route during the summer months.

But the exploration of the large unknown area between the North Pole and America will be of immense interest and value to science. And

EUROPE VIA POLE IS FUTURE ROUTE

Famous Explorer Says It Will Come in Few Years

By HAAKON H. HAMMER
Captain Roald Amundsen's Associate (Written Especially for NEA Service and The Port Arthur News)

In five or ten years the trans-polar route during the summer will be the quickest and safest air route to Europe. On that route one will be able to make safe emergency landings, that will never be possible on the Atlantic Ocean.

To explore the area along which such route will lie, is the object of Amundsen's trans-polar flight—not the rediscovery of the North Pole of the finding, and annexing, of a possible Arctic region. Success to Amundsen would mean the fulfillment of an old plan and task to which he set himself many years back.

War Mars Plans

In 1914 Amundsen was outfitting the Fram for a trans-polar drift and had purchased an airplane in order to make flights in the Arctic with his ship as a base. The war broke out and he was forced to postpone his plan.

In 1917-18 his new Arctic ship the Maud was being built in Norway after his own design but not until August, 1918, was he ready to start on his quest. Starting from Norway he set course through the North East Passage with the intention of forcing his ship into the Arctic ice pack and drift with the ice over the top of the world from the Pacific to the Atlantic side.

Due to a succession of mishaps the Maud did not freeze into the ice until August, 1922, and then without Amundsen on board as he in the meantime had decided to make an attempt of a trans-polar flight. It will take the Maud from five to seven years to drift across the Polar Basin while Amundsen expects to traverse the same territory in from 24 to 26 actual flying hours.

NEW TUTOR ADDED AT TEXAS UNIVERSITY

AUSTIN, Texas, April 12.—Mrs. Florence B. Smith, of Austin, has been added to the teaching staff of the University of Texas, as tutor in English, beginning with the spring term of the current session. She was graduated from the University of Michigan with the bachelor of arts degree, and is studying for the master of arts degree.

Just as surely as the submarine Deutschland negotiated the Atlantic Ocean during the World War, just as surely will airplanes negotiate the 1800-mile trans-polar flight in the next.

In the United States, we do not realize the progress of aviation in Europe.

Millions for Aircraft

Every country in Europe, large or small, is buying aircraft, experimenting, improving. Practically every government is spending millions to stimulate commercial aviation. The reason is clear. Large commercial air-fleets mean experienced pilots and valuable equipment. If a ship can only carry sufficient load, the load can just as well be machine guns, as passengers.

Europe is undoubtedly preparing for the day when aerial supremacy will be the best argument, and in the meantime the United States of America, the land of progress, of advancement, is placidly looking on and have dropped out of the trans-polar race.

Whether successful or unsuccessful, a trans-polar flight will be an extraordinary event in the history of aviation and will greatly serve to its further development.

"Three Weeks" Remains Over Sunday, Tiger Rose Here, "Boy of Mine" Coming

"Vanity Fair", Photoplay Taken From Famous Novel Coming to Strand Theatre

Hugo Ballin has produced for Goldwyn release what is probably the first subject which has ever been selected by the general public for motion picture production. This is "Vanity Fair" by William M. Thackeray, starring Mabel Ballin, which comes to the Strand theater on Thursday for two days.

Up to the time when the selection was made, Mr. Ballin had received 6,223 letters which mentioned 316 different stories. In this way he actually felt the public pulse as to motion picture preferences. Thirty per cent of his correspondents asked for the old type story, melodrama in tone, in which the villain, the hero, the wicked lady and the heroine were all pronounced types. As against this a small ten per cent requested the out and out mystery and detective story. Twenty-five per cent of the letters asked for stories more than thirty years old in which atmosphere and characterizations prevail as opposed to melodrama and in which the characters had more half-tones qualities rather than the black villain and sinless heroes. In this class several novels of religious tone were suggested. Costume stories rolled up an astonishing number of votes. Thirty per cent in all asked for that type of story and in this field "Vanity Fair" was the one selection obtaining the greatest number of votes. Four per cent asked for the picturization of stories now running serially in the magazines, and, strangely enough only one per cent requested comedies.

Production was barred on many of the public selections, such as "When Knighthood Was in Flower," and "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall," as these had either been produced or the rights for production were not available.

'TIGER ROSE' IS HERE TODAY

Famous Photoplay Appears At Peoples Theatre

"It's worth having, it's worth while waiting for," that's what the Warner Brothers seem to think in making us wait for their prize production of the year, David Belasco's "Tiger Rose."

Indeed it is many months since we read the announcement that Lenore Ulric, the star who created the title role on the legitimate stage, was going to portray the same part in the film production.

But it is a long road that has no ending, and now the Peoples theater announces that "Tiger Rose," a Sidney Franklin production, is going to play for 3 days beginning today.

It was in the original play that Lenore Ulric really rose to great fame as "Tiger Rose" the wildest child of the primitive northland, and for two years, night after night, she played to capacity audiences on Broadway. In this play she proved herself an actress of the highest calibre, and well earned the title of "David Belasco's greatest star." For another year the play traveled about the country showing at the principal cities and meeting with a success only equalled by its run in New York City.

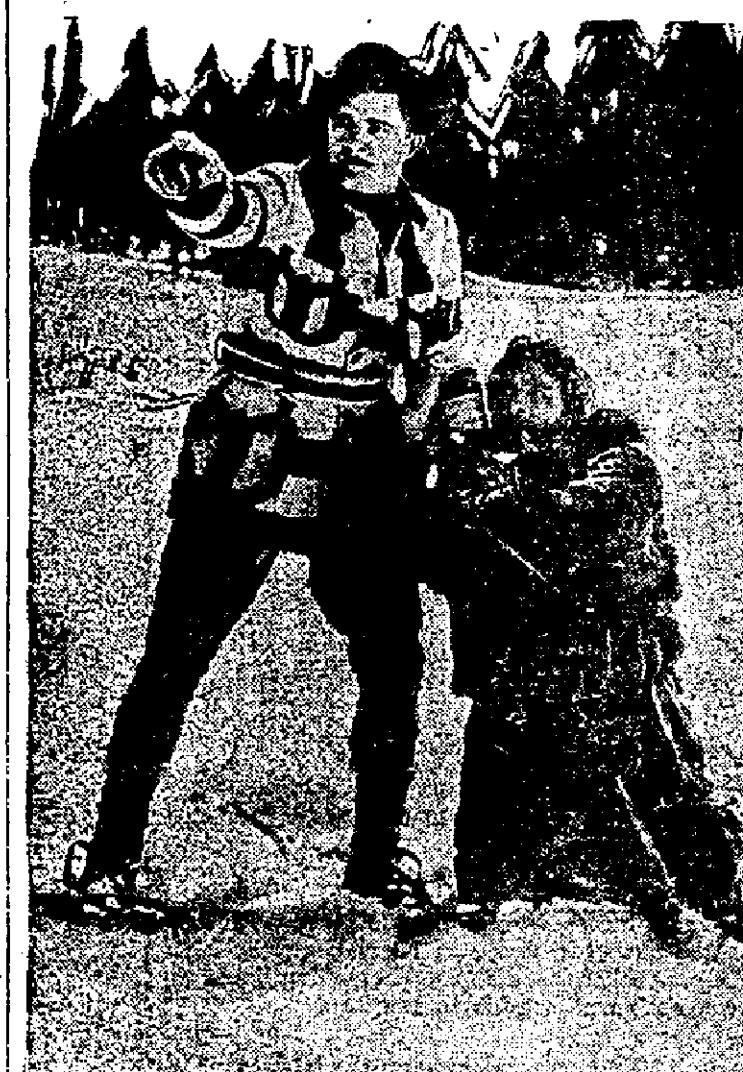

In "Tiger Rose" she plays a part

'LILIES OF THE FIELD HERE'

Story of Married Life Comes to Pearce

Brock, who gives promise of becoming a real star, gives an inimitable performance by her antics in the bathtub. "Lilies of the Field" is a gripping story that centers about the problems confronting the modern woman, and the road that destiny paves for her.

"Three Weeks" Remains At Pearce Over Sunday Following Week's Run

"Three Weeks," taken from Elinor Glyn's popular novel of the same name, proved such a decided hit at the Pearce theater during the last week that management of the Holton theaters announces today that it will remain at the Pearce through Sunday so that those who did not see the picture during its week run here may have an opportunity of seeing it.

Aside from the fact that the picture treats of a rather sensational subject in a big way, photography in the photoplay is unusually well done, and contributes much to the success of the piece.

'GRUB STAKE' HERE TUESDAY

Neal Shipman Stars In Popular Picture

Nell Shipman feels that "The Grub-Stake," her new picture in which she stars at the Strand theater Tuesday and Wednesday, will outdo all else that she has done. While no one will ever quite forget Nell Shipman as "The Girl From God's Country," the versatile actress-author has reason to believe that the character of Faith Diggs in "The Grub-Stake" is just a bit different and more life-like.

Miss Shipman occupies an unique place in the world of motion pictures for not only does she star in films of a kind peculiar to herself, but she writes the stories and co-directs them with Bert Van Thyle. And she declares that in writing "The Grub-Stake," the character of Faith created itself. The author had no more control over the emotional and impressional girl than she had over the lives of strangers. Faith simply came into the story, says Miss Shipman, and moved through it at will, living her life more vividly and vitally than do many flesh and blood people.

This is largely because Faith is real, explains the author—a girl whose soul is filled with the gentle purity of a mother, the unchained power of the wild creature, the fiery passion of starved love. All too seldom can a shadow being of the screen claim so much that reaches to the hearts of an audience.

"It's Greater than 'Penrod and Sam'!"

The story of a man who was a success as a husband, but a failure as a father.

Lonely, Nameless Sculptor Wanders Along Shore Molding Statues of Wife and Babe

FLOOD ROBBED HIM OF FAMILY

Wants to Spend Life In Strange Solitude

DODGE CITY, Kas., April 12.—A lonely, nameless sculptor wanders up and down the banks of midwestern rivers carving in wet sand figures of a mother and her babe.

A melancholy task is his. But it brings him the only comfort his great grief will permit him to enjoy.

The figure of the woman represents his wife, his babe, his child. They died in the Pueblo floods two years ago.

Recently the stranger appeared here. Few paid heed to him until they saw him molding figures in the sand.

Gradually crowds gathered and watched. But hour after hour went by without the stranger apparently noticing them, so absorbed was he in his work.

Slowly the sand assumed the shape of a young mother, washed upon the shore, with her child clasped to her breast.

Onlookers pressed the stranger for an explanation. And here is the tale he told:

"I went to Pueblo, Colo., with my wife and baby, for my health, just a few months before the floods of 1922. We were hardly there. It seemed, when the flood came.

"My wife and baby swept away by the rushing waters. I was, too, but the rescuers succeeded in dragging me out. But they missed my wife and baby."

"Knowing they had been carried down stream, I began my search. I scoured river banks and islands day and night.

"I found them on a sandbar in just the position I have carved them here."

"I often go to the little country churchyard, where they're buried now. But my grief does not find the comfort there that it does when I am molding these figures in the sand."

The stranger, though, refused to reveal his name or tell from whence he came.

"I have no desire," he says. "To go back to my former home or my old position. I don't want to be bothered with expressions of sympathy from my old friends and associates."

"I just want to be left alone near the waters that stole my wife and baby away from me."

BLOOD OF BROKEN GAMBLER FOR LUCK

NICE, April 12.—The blood of a broken gambler for luck, according to the old timers at Monte Carlo, and so several old women who are well-known players at the baccarat tables bent down and dipped their withered fingers in a ghastly pool on the floor.

A wealthy Austrian, who had lost heavily for several days and finally went broke, moved a few steps from the table, drew a revolver and blew out his brains. The body of the victim was quickly removed, but the hardened women gamblers went to the spot. Dainty feet trod carefully, luxurious silk gowns were held up that they might not be spotted, while jeweled hands reached for the faint that means luck. Then play went on.

TEXAS GIRL THROWS STONES AT COWBOYS

PHILADELPHIA, April 12.—The handsome, gallant and romantic cowboy of the movies is only a myth. They are not the great, big handsome men shown on the silver screen. In reality there is little about a cowboy to turn a girl's head. They are like big overgrown farm boys and not one in a dozen knows what a toothbrush looks like. They can ride, sure enough, but that is about all."

This is the picture of Texas cowboys painted in words by Miss Marion Schaffstall of Ranger, Tex., who has just paid a visit to Philadelphia.

"And they (the cowboys) do the dumbest things outside their work with the cows. If they feel like it they will take any fool thing for medicine. They figure that if one pill a day will make them well in a week, seven pills ought to fit them up in a few minutes," says Miss Schaffstall.

DR. ROBERTS TO BE CONVENTION SPEAKER

NEW YORK, April 12.—Dr. Richard Roberts, pastor of the American Presbyterian church at Montreal, Canada, will be the chief speaker at the national biennial convention of the Young Women's Christian Association, to be held at New York April 30-May 6.

Dr. Roberts will open each convention session giving a series of talks. Over 2,500 delegates, representing every state in the union, and official guests and visitors from Europe, South America and the Far East, are expected.

Dr. Roberts first came to America from England in answer to a call from the Church of the Pilgrims in Brooklyn. In 1921 he went to Montreal. Three of his books have been published in America. "The Untired Door" is the best known of his work.

NO WONDER IT ACHED!
LONDON, April 12.—Michael Nuttall, soldier, complained of stomachache.

Medical examination disclosed "strange and unknown" conditions in his stomach, according to the doctor's report.

Surgeons sliced him open and removed the following: Eighty-seven toise-shoe nails, two pieces of wire, two safety-pins, one writing penpoint and one trouser's button.

The patient is said to be improving rapidly. He has announced abandonment of his ambition to become an "acid-stomached man" in the side-business. He had been training for this profession.

Action Is Dominant

In "The Lone Wagon," a covered wagon accidentally rolling backwards off the mountain road into the precipice, with the occupants jumping for their lives!

Indians in their war paint riding fearlessly down the steep side of a mountain, then racing up a narrow canyon with one of the horses rolling over backwards, almost rolling over the body of his Indian rider.

A band of Indians attacking "The Lone Wagon" with its few Indians fighting with their backs to the wall ready to touch off the powder kegs that would blow them all to kingdom come should the Indians break through.

The foregoers are only a small part of the many countless bits of fast action that go into the making of the thrill-speeders entitled "The Lone Wagon," a Stanford production, featuring Matty Mattison, Vivian Rich, Earl McLean, Gene Crosby and Lafayette McKee, which comes to the Liberty theater for a run of two days, starting tomorrow.

Ivan Abramson On Prohibition Law

One of the features in the story of "The Wrong Woman," an Ivan Abramson production to be shown at the Liberty theater on Wednesday, is the indictment of the laxity of prohibition. Guy Combs who is acting the part of Peter Barrett has become a habitual drunkard in his own home. This problem has become one worthy of consideration today. Prohibition has forced those who have the means to lay in a goodly store of spirits, which is at their constant disposal.

Dr. Roberts first came to America from England in answer to a call from the Church of the Pilgrims in Brooklyn. In 1921 he went to Montreal. Three of his books have been published in America. "The Untired Door" is the best known of his work.

GIRL BANDIT HYSTERIA ON

Women Police Called on To Check Flappers

NEW YORK, April 12.—All of Gotham is suffering with a bobbed-hair bandit dementia. Just let a young woman with short locks and her husband, brother or sweetheart stop to look in a store window and the merchant within prepares to greet the Bobbed-Haired Bandit.

Now Mrs. Albert E. Guimares wife of the young fellow who was brought to public attention through the Dot King murder case, is in the shadow of her husband, brother or sweetheart to stop to look in a store window and the merchant within prepares to greet the Bobbed-Haired Bandit.

Most of them said she wasn't the girl. And some of them said maybe she was and maybe she wasn't, that they had been so excited when they were held up that they couldn't tell.

And in the meantime the police are proceeding on the theory that it takes a woman to catch a woman at crooked work. Hundreds of patrolmen and detectives have tried for weeks to catch the young lady who relished a dozen or more storekeepers in Brooklyn and then jumped to Manhattan to spread the girl bandit hysteria in that borough.

Policewomen have been recruited to catch her.

→ TO BUILD ROADS

QUEBEC, P. Q., Canada, April 12.—Instructions have been issued to engineers by the provincial department of colonization to make the necessary arrangements to start work on colonization roads as soon as conditions will permit.

Visions of the Bobbed-Haired Bandit immediately came to Charles Bernstein, the tailor. He telephoned for the police. The young man, hearing dashed from the store. Mrs. Guimares remained.

The patrol came and took her to the station house and thousands of women gathered to look at her.

She complacently puffed at a cigarette and told the police she didn't know the young fellow who escaped and that she had not been with him. And the police called in the score of victims of the Bobbed-Haired Bandit.

Why the Growing Popularity Of Genuine Linoleum?

One of the chief reasons for the rapidly growing interest in linoleum is that many people now realize why it does not pay to buy the cheaper substitutes commonly made of paper felt.

People realize why such a backing as burlap is necessary to give your floor covering the strength to withstand the hard usage of many tramping feet. Housewives have learned that the cork and linseed oil used in making linoleum give an elastic substance that makes it comfortable to walk on.

Above all, people know that genuine linoleum, when properly laid, gives a lower cost per year of service than substitutes made of paper felt.

Why We Recommend Armstrong's Linoleum

It is the policy of this store to offer its patrons the best merchandise to be had, at the lowest possible prices. We feature Armstrong's Linoleum because we know it is of the highest quality.

When you buy Armstrong's Linoleum your satisfaction is guaranteed by this store and the makers.

A SIMPLE NEW ENGLAND COLONIAL HOME EXPRESSING BEAUTY AND UTILITY

HOMES REFLECT PERSONALITIES

Therefore, They Should Be Chosen Carefully

Your home reflects your personality.

The first impression a stranger has of your home and surroundings comes from his view of your home. First the exterior, then the interior.

Therefore, the house you live in is just as important a factor in the impression you would like to create as the furnishings you design for it. Care in choosing the right kind of house is the first essential.

Under this comes the consideration of climatic suitability, as well as personal preference. For instance, whether or not you like the light-painted, stucco homes of Spanish design so often seen in the southwest, it would be wrong to transport this idea to the lakes region or to New England. That sort of home fits only in a warm, sunny climate like that of southern California.

For the same reason, a New England colonial home looks out of place in the south, and a southern colonial, with its tall porch pillars, is a stranger in the north. Yet such anomalies are met occasionally, although not often.

Utility Essential
The type of home you want should not be out of place in your territory. Yet it may be as individual as you like. So long as it conforms to a definite idea.

Lack of conformity to a definite idea is what aids most homes that are put up today. Beauty, attractiveness are what the builders seek. But they fail of their purpose in most homes they put up just because they fail to consider the most important factor. That is utility.

A house should be beautiful, but it must be useful, else it is of no value to you.

Therefore, in buying a home, note carefully its layout. Of what use is a beautiful easement window at the dining-room side of the house if it cuts off all wall space possibilities? That little window in the upper center of the front elevation helps balance the house, but if you find it unbalanced one of the bedrooms so that you can-

The goal was set at $100 and already over half of this amount has been raised.

It was the hoarse bark of "Woody" that aroused Russ Forth to the fire danger. Forth and his wife, clasping Betty Jean in her arms, leaped from a second story window but were fatally injured. "Woody" was trapped

SCOTS WIN GREAT VICTORY IN HOUSE

LONDON, April 12—Hoot, man! Scotland has won another great victory!

You can get haggis now in the House of Commons.

Haggis is to the Scotsman what baked beans are supposed to be to the Bostonian or hot corn bread to the U. S. Southerner.

And yet you couldn't get haggis in the dining room in the House of Commons.

Day after day the members from Scotland would order haggis. Day after day they would have to compromise on British roast beef; so on month after month and year after year. And a day or two ago they got results. They ordered haggis—and, lo, there was haggis!

"Every Tuesday hereafter there will be haggis on the menu, sir," the waiters said. "Tuesday is the day for consideration of Scottish questions in the House."

The Scottish members announced that haggis one day in the week is better than no haggis at all, but that they will never strike their colors until they can obtain haggis every day in the week.

Expects to Have 400 Babies Attend Church Sunday

That's the question Rev. R. R. Yelderman, pastor of the First Christian church, sprang last Sunday, announcing that:

"Sunday I'm going to tell you, at the evening service."

Rev. Yelderman said this morning he expects to have between 300 and 400 babies as guests of his church tomorrow night. All members of his church have been urged to bring babies to the service.

"And if you haven't got one of your own, borrow your neighbor's," he said.

PASSION WEEK TO BE OBSERVED

Special Services at Local Churches

Ushering in the week preceding Easter, called throughout Christendom the "Passion Week," special services will be conducted in Port Arthur churches today and throughout the coming week, culminating in the Easter services Sunday, April 20.

Services Friday commemorating the crucifixion include a special three hours service in St. George's Episcopal church, Stillwell boulevard and Fifth streets, Rev. John Ridout, Jr., rector, said Saturday. This service will start at noon and continue until three o'clock.

Other Holy Week Services

Other Holy Week services arranged for St. George's church will be the celebration of Holy Communion at 12:30 a.m. on Tuesday and Wednesday. An evening service also will be held in St. George's Thursday at 7:15 o'clock in commemoration of the institution of the Lord's Supper, Rev. Ridout said.

A series of special Passion Week services in the First Congregational church will be conducted by Rev. Charles Weidner, pastor, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday nights. Sermons announced by Rev. Weidner for this series of services are: "The Word Became Flesh," "The Way of Life," "Three Conditions of Discipleship."

Methodist Observance

Designed to bring out the deeper meanings of Christ's sufferings and sacrifices, culminating with the crucifixion, services will be conducted in the First M. E. church, Stillwell boulevard and Lake Shore Drive, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday night of the coming week, Rev. Dr. C. W. Rodgers, pastor, said. Dr. Rodgers will trace the life of Christ on earth during these services.

Newsboys Tam Has Plenty Of Good Resolves

MEXIA, April 12—This city, famous for its oil field, is now bidding for attention because of its newsboys' baseball team. Not so much, perhaps, because of what is expected of the team, but rather because of the set of resolutions prospective players are required to sign by the organization's sponsor, E. J. Ormsby.

Here's what the boys agree to do or not to do:

I will report every time practice is called.

I will be on hand in time for every game.

I will play in any position on the team that I may be called on to fill to the best of my ability.

I will obey the manager in every respect.

I will not "holler" at or "bawl out" any player on my team for a poor play.

I will try to encourage every player to win.

I will not throw my glove at a player or at the ball.

I will always try to keep my eye on the ball.

I will be a good loser and not fight with any player on the ball diamond without permission from the manager.

I will play in any position on the team that I may be called on to fill to the best of my ability.

CONTEST OPEN
UNTIL APRIL 23

Suggestions Should Be Sent

The Port Arthur Boy Scout Council announces there will be a name for its camp to be held on Beach Creek this summer. The location is the same spot where camp was held last year. The Scout who gives the best name will receive a free trip to the camp for two weeks beginning June 1, and ending June 29. The contest will close at 5 p.m., Wednesday, April 23, 1924. Bring or mail all names to Scout headquarters, Room 17, Distinguished building.

TROOP SIX
Troop Six opened their meeting at 8 p.m. This hour was set for the reason that all of the boys attended services at the church.

After the pledge of allegiance and Scout oath were said, the roll was called. Seventeen members and four candidates were present. The candidates were instructed in their tenderfoot tests. The patrol leaders were called up and the patrol cards were given out. While this was going on inspection was held. Mr. Jackowitz, who is our Scout committeeman, was asked to pass upon inspection. Those who remained standing after his careful examination were: Lawrence and Alfred Moreau, Milton and Elroy Quesbedoux, Tom Beadle, George Stiehl and Leonard Stanbury. All were members of patrol four so they carried the points for the contest. Mr. Jackowitz spoke for a few minutes. He expressed the desire that every Scout wear his uniform and urged that those who have none to do their best toward obtaining one. He is offering a prize to the troop having the most Scouts in uniform by a certain date. The senior patrol leader and scribe will decide upon the prize. Come on fellows and let us get that prize.

A game called "Rooster Fighting" was played. As one is defeated he continues to fight the remaining fellow. "Sweat the Fly" was then played. It is a game well liked by the members of our troop. The patrol cards were turned in and scored. Patrol four, 49 points; patrol one, 28 points; patrol three, 29 points; patrol two, 14 and a fraction. Patrol four's Scout went up another rung on the ladder. That meeting was closed with call to colors after which the patrol leaders, senior patrol leader and scribe held their meeting. At the next meeting a captain will be elected for the baseball team. Hurry says, "rush the bird houses, only two more meetings till due."

We held our meeting Friday night. Only thirteen members were present. No tests were passed. Roll was called. Games were played and in the contest game of "Steal the Flag" Clifford Harris and his chosen bunch won. Two visitors were present. It is hoped that a better attendance will be had at the next meeting and that tests will be passed.

We met at the Methodist church Friday night. All members were present. The Scout oath was said in unison. Roll was called. The rest of the meeting was spent in passing the sleep tests. Most of us lack but a few tests before the sleep class is completed. They are Coxswain Pond and Clifton Dennis. We seem to have lost the spirit for work. We have been requested several times to report to the hut for work and each time only one or two would show up. Make the next Saturday a real banner day at the hut. Our crew has lots to do and it will not be long before the Sea Scout camp will be held and we will be rushed at the last minute. A few games of "caddie" were played. Mack Pond, Ernest McFarland and Frank Capps played Floyd Clarke and Weldon Sherwood. The former beat the latter team 5 to 3. No casualties as the game was played scientifically. Three members are behind with their registration fees and are urged to "snap them in."

FLOYD CLARKE, Yeoman.
Troop 15 held its regular meeting Wednesday night. The Scout oath was said in unison. Roll was called and dues collected. Election of officers took place with results as follows: Roy Gentil, senior patrol leader, scribe, Albie Bertrand, patrol leader, No. 2, Oswell Landry; Nolan Landry, assistant patrol No. 2, Chester Billard, patrol leader; Earl Sargent, assistant patrol 3; Ray Gentil.

TROOP 15
The Bicycle Patrol met at the home of Mr. Daspit last Tuesday night.

Mr. Daspit suggested that the patrol specialize in a merit badge and signalling was chosen. When every member is declared perfect the patrol will put on exhibitions and tender service to the troops in the city which desire aid. It was decided that all Scouts in the patrol would be required to pass the cycling merit badge within the next two months or discard their badges. At the last board of examiners, four out of the bicycle patrol went up for badges. They were Walton Dumesell, Aristide Landry, George Stiehl and Leonard Stanbury. This shows that the Scouts in the patrol are anxious to forge ahead. Enoch Provost who was initiated last week is now attending meetings as a member. Roy Gentil will be the next initiated into the patrol. Mr. Daspit read an article forwarded to him from proved to be very interesting. All the Washington headquarters. It members present seemed to be "full up" with the baseball idea. The line of players is as follows: Walton Dumesell, pitcher; Roy Gentil, catcher; Bruce Watta, first baseman; Enoch Provost, short stop; Theo Jurek, third baseman; Leonard Stanbury, center-field; Chubby Stiehl, right field, and Aristide Landry, left field. Captain, Walton

Thrift Essays Written for First National Bank by Pupils of Port Arthur Public Schools

Thrift is the basis of self-help, the condition of one who thrives or prospers. We must work for the present and future. The really thrifty people are those who waste nothing and spend wisely.

We may base thrift on: Time, money and material.

No phase of thrift is more important than proper use of time. The exclusion of minor and unimportant details is what we must consider.

The earning and saving of money should be made our duty. Every person should learn to invest properly and buy intelligently. The most valuable chances for saving and investments are: "The First National Bank," "The Thrift Stamp," and "The War Saving Stamp." Every one should start a bank account.

Thrift teaching lays emphasis upon simplicity in dress, clothing is renovated and repaired, instead of thrown away. Girls can make garments for their own use. Shoes may be sent to the cobbler.

Dumesell; manager, Leonard Stanbury. A game was obtained with Port Neches for Sunday. Right after first service we will leave for Port Neches. One visitor was present and so were our two assistant scoutmasters. Our visitor was Mr. Moran and the assistant scoutmasters who will go with us on our thousand mile ride are Mr. Murphy ergous and Mr. McCarthy. A game was played on the outside and much fun was derived from it. We were dismissed at 9:30 p.m.

"LONE STAR" SEASIDE
We met at our ship's headquarters last Wednesday night. We rowed to the city ship before the meeting was held. The meeting was called to order by Coxswain "Cow" King. The Scout oath was said in unison after which roll was called and dues collected. It was urged that those who have not paid their registration fees do so at a very early date in order that the ship may be placed in good standing at headquarters. A work meeting for Saturday was discussed and any number promised to turn out for it.

"Cow" King, "Coffee John" and several others went in for a swim and while enjoying themselves someone hid their clothes. Quite a lot of fun was had with them while they were hunting for their clothes. Since the warm weather a number of the boys have taken to the water.

WILLIAM JAMES, Yeoman.

"TROOP SEVEN"

Our regular meeting was held at the Seacrest Hut Friday night. A good attendance made the meeting happy. Several of the boys took up their work. Games were played and the compass game proved to be the best and hottest. Mr. Waltrip announced that we would have a veterans next Friday night across the canal. It is urged that those who desire to go on this weiner meet at the Seacrest Hut at 7:30 p.m. or they will be left behind. Try and get every member in Troop Seven to attend and show the old time pep we used to have. Failure to do so will prove you have no "get up" in you.

PARIS STARTS +
BOOZE FIGHT

Land of Grape Juice in Big Contest

BY MILTON BRONNER
NEA Service Staff Correspondent
PARIS, April 12—France, land of sparkling fermented grape juice, brandies, liqueurs, cordials and appetizers, has a healthy and growing anti-boozey movement.

Right here in Paris where booze is as plentiful as beans in New York, wind in Chicago and sunshine in Los Angeles, there are at least 14 societies whose main object in life is to fight booze.

The biggest of them—"Ligue Nationale contre l'Alcoolisme"—has its headquarters right on the famous Boulevard Saint Germain, scene of so many famous drinking contests.

True, the various societies and leagues do not seem to have advanced very far, or to have become prosperous, as yet—but it must be remembered that the prohibition movement in the United States was scoffed at in its infancy and regarded as an impossible goal.

Anti-Alcohol in Stomachs

There is a striking similarity in the literature put out here and that scattered about the United States during the prohibition movement. American arguments are translated into terms of French life, French experiments, French science, French speeches and French statistics.

"Alcohol in Jumps, under Boilers, in motors—but not in stomachs," is a statement credited to a former president of the republic, Casimir-Perier.

Three Lines of Attack

The anti-boozey societies of France advocate three methods of procedure:

FIRST—An extensive campaign of education to be begun in the schools to teach the people the dangers of alcohol.

SECOND—Laws which, if not downright prohibitory, would at least move in the direction of temperance. And one of the first moves in this direction, they say, would be to cut down the number of saloons. It is pointed out that per thousand inhabitants, Paris has 11.23 saloons, compared with S. S. 1 in San Francisco's palmiest days. Bordeaux, the big city which is the capital of the wine country of France, has 5.44, compared to 3.95 Chicago used to have. 3.15 in New York and 1.34 in Philadelphia.

THIRD—Further encouragement in the present boom in outdoor athletic sports. Various French athletes are quoted as saying they can't think higher if they want to maintain their superiority as athletes and carry off prizes.

FLYING CURES "NERVES"

LONDON, April 12—Bound over on a charge of assaulting a woman, Joseph McGarry, 42, said:

"I hope to go back in the Air Force as a pilot. My nerves are too shaken for a dental surgeon."

CREW 5, SEA SCOUTS

We met at the Methodist church Friday night. All members were present. The Scout oath was said in unison. Roll was called. The rest of the meeting was spent in passing the sleep tests. ELMO DEMONSTRATION
This Week

"ELMO—FOR BEAUTY"

Five Minutes a Day Creates Beauty

MADAME HELLENE

Beauty Expert, at Deutser's Says It Costs But

Half a Penny

Before coming to Port Arthur Madame Hellene, Beauty Specialist, representing the Elmo Toilet Preparations, made an extensive study of the southwestern climate effects on the complexion and says that the correct use of the right creams will improve and beautify anyone's complexion even in our trying climate. She further says that it takes but five minutes a day and the cost is but half a penny a day for the treatment necessary.

Continuing, Madame Hellene says: "One may have good eyes, regular features and glorious hair, but if the complexion is shallow or colorless there is little beauty in the face." Modern beauty creams do much to eradicate any unnatural conditions of the skin, and she personally recommends Elmo, preparations for this climate, to be used as follows:

For removing blackheads and whiteheads and building up the tissue use Elmo Tissue Cream. For cleansing the skin thoroughly and for bleaching use Elmo Cleansing Cream. If the skin is discolored or the pores enlarged the Elmo Cucumber Cream is used.

Especially suited to our climate is the Elmo Liquid Face Powder (for it stays on and protects the skin at the same time.) The Ralo Almond Meal Face Powder, made by Elmo, is also beneficial.

A bit of rouge, artistically applied when it comes in nature's own tints such as the Elmo Rouge comes in, is the nearest approach to the natural coloring of youth. Madame Hellene will be at this store one week and will be pleased to give you any further information you desire along these lines. She will also be pleased to tell you what treatment will be best suited to your particular needs.

Thrift teaching lays emphasis upon simplicity in dress, clothing is renovated and repaired, instead of thrown away. Girls can make garments for their own use. Shoes may be sent to the cobbler.
